Trains Moving In Slow Motion

Times News Services

A New Westminster meeting of the joint council of railway workers voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to continue their defiance of the back-to-work legislation, thus preventing the resumption of normal rail traffic in British Columbia.

Besides the 1,000 workers at New Westminster, about 6,000 other rail workers in British Columbia remained off the job Tuesday, crippling all but isolated rail movements.

Similar pockets of resistance developed at Capreol, Thunder Bay, and Fort Erie, Ont., Winnipeg and Calgary. The Capreol protestors have formed their own association to press for increased wage demands.

A Canadian National Railways crew was despatched to Youbou this morning to switch 12 loads of lumber from the B.C. Forest Product mill.

The Youbou crew and the CN's yard engine crew at Point Ellice were the only rail transport in operation on Vancouver Island.

The Youbou lumber was to be handled by the CN's ferry crew at Cowichan Bay.

A CN official said the Point Ellice operation was experiencing difficulties servicing local industry because of lack of equipment.

"There's nothing coming over from the mainland," he said.

Nothing was moving on the Vancouver Island tracks of the Canadian Pacific Railways and the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway.

However, in Nanaimo, Jack Mason, chairman of the Vancouver Island local of the United Transportation Union, said today a meeting Tuesday night voted almost unanimously to return to work this afternoon.

Mason said it's a "reluctant" return to work and "we're still totally dissatisfied with the settlement."

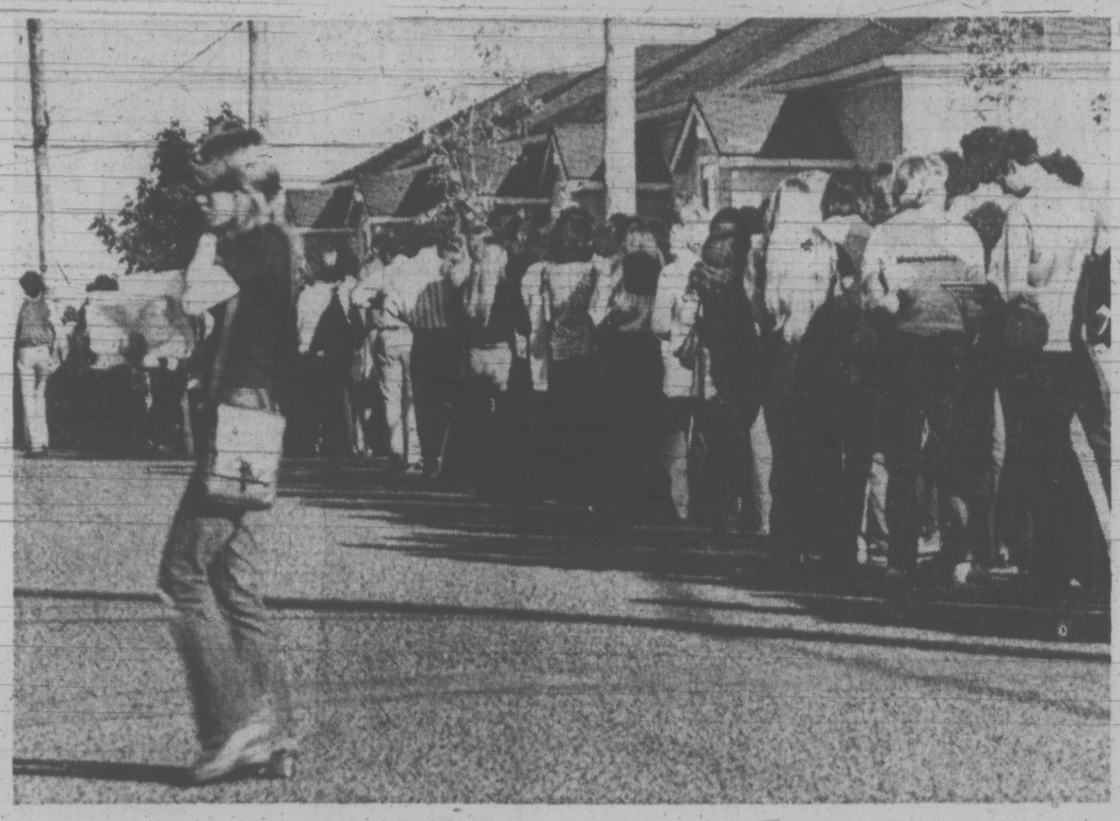

The union represents workers employed by the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway, which is owned by CP Rail.

The CP's Carrier Princess, however, was back on her normal runs between Nanaimo, Vancouver and Swartz Bay, carrying trucks and foot passengers.

The CP's Princess Vancouver was also hauling freight and passengers on her three round trips between Nanaimo and Vancouver.

Meanwhile two Canadian National Railways freight trains arrived in Vancouver today from Boston Bar, 150 miles east, but a CN spokes-

Showdown Looms On Illegal Fishing

The federal fisheries department today adopted a hard line with Indian demonstrators now fishing with an illegal weir on the Cowichan River, bringing the possibility of a confrontation nearer.

Maurice Houghton, director of the department's conservation and protection branch, said from Vancouver there will be a meeting "shortly," possibly today, with representatives of the Cowichan band.

They will be advised the weir the demonstrators are using is illegal and will have to be removed, he said.

The band council had earlier disassociated itself from the demonstration and this is still the council's position, band manager Betty Chown said from Duncan today.

About 30 young Indians, many of them not from the Cowichan band, have been camped about a mile above the river mouth for over a week. To protest restrictions on their river fishing, they have installed a weir, a stake and branches fence across the river which forces spawning salmon into a trap.

The statement from Houghton is the second indication the department is adopting a get-tough stance. Tuesday night Environment Minister Jack Davis said he would not negotiate with anyone who is breaking the law.

Davis had been invited by the demonstrators to come to the weir site Thursday where a submission, detailing their grievances, was to be handed to him.

Gordon Elliott, spokesman for the protesters, said the submission would be given to reporters, whether Davis showed up or not.

Earlier he had said most of the Indians in the band who traditionally fish the river with special permits are not able to spear enough salmon to adequately feed their families. They want to revert to the old-time weir, while ensuring sufficient fish escape to produce future runs.

The protesters want Ottawa to finance a study on the feasibility of establishing a hatchery on the Cowichan.

Last week he said the demonstrators included Indians from Nass River, Bella Bella, Bella Coola, Cache Creek, Lillooet on the mainland as well as Westholme, 10 miles north of Duncan.

Houghton said today there is "some indication" there may also be Indian militants from the U.S.

GUERRILLAS SEIZE EMBASSY

PARIS (UPI) — Three armed Palestinian guerrillas seized the Saudi Arabian embassy and an undetermined number of hostages today, threatening to blow up the building unless they were granted free passage out of France.

The guerrillas also said they were demanding the release of a leading Palestinian guerrilla serving a life sentence in Jordan.

The guerrillas initially gave police a 5 p.m. (noon EDT) deadline to provide them a car to the airport and a plane out of France, but extended the deadline twice.

Hundreds of police wearing helmets and bullet-proof vests and including a team of sharpshooters surrounded the Greystone building in the swank 16th district not far from the Arc De Triomph.

Arabs Cool On Oil

Times News Services

Ministers from major Arab oil-producing countries met in Kuwait Tuesday, but an Egyptian official said there was no discussion of cutbacks in oil production as a possible weapon against the United States.

In Washington, U.S. State department oil specialists assessed the shifting petroleum situation in the Middle East.

The department spokesman said the United States regrets Libya's action in seizing a 51-per-cent interest in five major Western oil companies.

In Kuwait, there had been reports that the ministers considered using their oil production to influence what they consider Washington's pro-Israeli policy in the Middle East dispute.

An Egyptian delegate to the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries (OAPEC), also said the ministers planned to raise the possibility of renegotiating oil price agreements at an emergency meeting in Vienna with the major oil exporters and customers.

"Some of the ministers are leaving here directly for Vienna," the delegate said. "The Tehran price agreement comes strictly within the sphere of the organization of petroleum exporting countries."

The minister's meeting Tuesday declared support for Libya in nationalizing 51 per cent of the foreign oil firms in the country on Saturday.

Oil Firms Angered By Freeze

Times News Services

The oil industry has reacted with anger to federal proposals for a price freeze on petroleum products.

Spokesmen called Prime Minister Trudeau's announcement Tuesday a political move which will, in the long run, be a disservice.

They said it could reduce exploration for oil, thereby reducing reserves, deplete future provincial government revenue and possibly create further conflicts between the provincies and the federal government.

Most spokesmen interpreted the prime minister's statement as a request for the petroleum industry to hold prices until Jan. 30 on a voluntary basis.

However, no one was saying whether they would follow Trudeau's request.

"The independent oil producers are very disturbed by the thought of price controls," said G. W. Cameron, manager of the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada.

"I believe the proposed freeze on crude and petroleum products is solely for political reasons. During the last 15 years, crude price increases have done little more than keep even with inflation."

An increase of 40 cents a barrel for Western Canadian crude oil went into effect on Aug. 1, and some companies said they still had not caught up with the increased costs of their supplies.

Premier Barrett said in Kelowna the voluntary controls are a timid move.

Barrett said the oil companies have not been known for their willingness to co-operate with anyone.

If the federal government found it necessary to bring in legislation to end the national railway strike, it should use legislation to control petroleum prices, he said.

"B.C. will continue to watch the situation very closely", he said in a reference to the powers which exist under the B.C. Energy Act. This act was brought in last spring, but a section providing for price controls in the petroleum industry was not proclaimed into law.

Since Jan. 1, gasoline prices have been increased five cents a gallon in Ontario, four cents east of the Ottawa Valley where imported supplies are used, and 3.6 cents in Western provinces.

NO BUDGET

OTTAWA (CP) — The government at present has no intention of introducing any type of budget, Finance Minister John Turner told the Commons Tuesday.

He was replying to Opposition Leader Stanfield, who asked if the government intended to eliminate its sales tax on building materials and children's clothes in a new budget.

Grits Meet NDP Price

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau reckons he's proposed enough to deal with inflation for now and stay in power a little longer.

As James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) unkindly observed in the House Tuesday, the prime minister had just given the New Democrats about half of what they demanded as the price of their continued support for the minority government.

—Pensions under the old age security and guaranteed income supplement plans will be escalated every three months, beginning Oct. 1, instead of every year, to reflect increases in the cost of living;

—The two per cent ceiling on the annual cost-of-living escalation of pensions paid under the Canada Pension Plan and under plans for retired federal government employees will be removed, the CPP change depending on the approval of the provinces;

—Not waiting for the scheduled Jan. 1 raise in family allowances to an average of $20 per month, taxable, the government will make an interim increase to $12 a month, non-taxable, beginning in October;

—The current $1 per bushel subsidy for wheat will be increased to $1.25 per bushel consumed by Canadians as a "consumer subsidy," but with the maximum as well as the minimum price to farmers being fixed—a measure designed to keep the price of bread from continuing to rise;

—A five cents-per-quart subsidy will be paid on milk in provinces where marketing boards agree to hold or reduce the price of milk for at least one year; and

—The oil industry will be asked to refrain from further price increases to Canadian

KINGSVIEW ACCEPTS

NORTH COWICHAN — George Treit, director of development for Kingsview Properties Ltd., has sent North Cowichan council a letter of acceptance of amended land-use contract demands for a 1,300-home subdivision at Maple Bay.

These give North Cowichan a measure of control never before instituted by a Vancouver Island community, he said.

$1 Million Award

EAST HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A state referee has ordered three labor unions to pay the United Aircraft Corp. more than $1 million in damages stemming from a 1960 strike at the corporation's Pratt and Whitney and Hamilton Standard divisions. The award was part of the corporation's $6,453,869 loss during the job action which included "the involuntary absence of employes because of fear and coercion" ruled the referee.

Pound Plummets

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's pound took a beating today and pulled the U.S. dollar down with it on most European money markets. The price of gold rose. The Frankfurt exchange fixed the dollar at 2.4385, its lowest price for two weeks. Gold jumped more than $2 an ounce. By mid-day it cost only $2.4180 to buy a pound, compared with $2.4415 Tuesday night.

Drug Roundup Nets 20

A major round-up of drug traffickers, mainly in heroin, on Vancouver Island resulted in the arrest of at least 20 people Tuesday night and police are searching for another 17, an RCMP spokesman said today.

The arrests are the result of more than three months of work by two RCMP undercover narcotics agents.

Warrants for the arrests of 37 persons were issued Tuesday and police are seeking suspects in Victoria, Port Alberni, Nanaimo, Courtenay and Campbell River.

Of the warrants issued, 21 involve trafficking in heroin and 16 involve "other drug-related offences," the spokesman said.

Five people appeared in Victoria provincial court today charged with trafficking in heroin and another person was charged with trafficking in LSD.

Joseph Pagnotta, 21, of 1028 Princess, and Micheline Francoeur, 19, of no fixed address, were charged jointly and were remanded in custody until Friday for election of trial method. The two are charged with trafficking in heroin on July 21.

Manning MacKeigan, 22, of no fixed address, was charged with trafficking July 31 in Victoria. He will also appear in court again Friday.

Hefty Terms For Heroin

Robert Langer, 30, convicted July 16 on a charge of conspiracy to traffic in heroin, today was sentenced to a total of 20 years by Victoria county court Judge M. L. Drake. Co-conspirator Michael Kinsces, 27, was sentenced to 15 years.

Kinsces and Langer were charged Oct. 26 with conspiracy to traffic heroin and possession of heroin for the purposes of trafficking. Also charged at the time were Daniel Hadden, 57, Sharon Dannenberg, 29, and Wendy Dance, 25.

Dannenberg was sentenced to seven years July 20 on the possession charge and the conspiracy charge stayed by the crown.

Hadden was sentenced to five years for conspiracy and acquitted on the possession count. Dance was acquitted on both charges.

Prosecutor Cecil Branson told the court that Hadden and Langer were convicted in 1969 of conspiring together to utter forged documents.

"If there is ever a case of two men who haven't learned their lesson, this surely must be the one," said Branson.

He said Kinsces was "a person apparently aware of the extreme dangers of this venomous substance."

Italian 'Way of Life' Deadly

ROME (UPI) — Not enough syringes.

Doctors reporting cholera cases hours late.

Raw sewage flowing into the sea . . .

Italy's cholera outbreak has dramatically exposed some of the shortcomings Italians used to shrug off as part of this country's way of life. Nineteen deaths in eight days have shocked people into awareness that sloppiness can be dangerous.

Health officials have reported 159 confirmed cholera cases since the disease was first detected in Naples August 28. Scores more of suspected cases are under observation.

"Unless we stamp out the disease within three months, there is a danger cholera may become endemic as in some parts of the Middle East," a provincial health officer said in Milan. The city so far has had only one case but receives a steady flow of immigrants from cholera-infested southern Italy.

Health Minister Luigi Gui said during a visit in Bari, one of the main centres of the outbreak, the spread of the disease had been contained and the condition of patients was "generally satisfactory."

But with the tales of efficiency come stories of sloppiness and disorganization.

In the opening days of the outbreak, health officials in Naples could not find enough syringes to administer vaccine. In Torre Del Greco, one of the worst hit communities, the outbreak found six of the town's 13 pharmacies closed for summer vacations. A health ministry expert in Rome said the government had been notified of the outbreak five days late.

The city's century-old sewer system, which dumps raw sewage straight into the sea, was accused as one of the main culprits in the outbreak.

"For 13 years, despite our efforts, no new streetcleaners have been hired and more than half of Naples' streetcleaners are more than 55 years old," Cerciello said.

Rome health authorities blamed the spread of the disease on polluted mussels and other shellfish. The government has banned the sale and consumption of mollusks all over Italy.

JURY INDICTS EHRLICHMAN

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A grand jury indicted former presidential aide John Ehrlichman and three members of the White House "plumbers" unit Tuesday in connection with the burglary of the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist, it was reported today.

The grand jury, which returned secret indictments Tuesday, was reported to have charged Ehrlichman with perjury and conspiracy to commit burglary for his alleged role in the September, 1971, break-in of the Los Angeles offices of Dr. Henry Fielding.

Convicted Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy and former White House aides David Young and Egil "Bud" Krogh were said to have been charged with conspiracy to commit burglary.

The identity of those indicted and the charges against them were reported by at least two newspapers — The Los Angeles Times and The Washington Post.

Surprising Jump in Enrolments

School enrolments in Greater Victoria and Saanich school districts have surpassed expectations this year.

Final figures are not in, but Saanich district elementary schools appear to have 5 per cent more students than last September, said director of instruction Tom Elwood today.

But the district seems to have reverted to the pattern of earlier years, when a 6 per cent growth per year was the rule, said Elwood.

"We have had an unexpectedly large number of enrolments at the kindergarten level," said Bill Stavdal, Greater Victoria school district's community relations officer.

"And there are indications that enrolment at the senior high school level is unexpectedly high."

Pressure points in terms of enrolments are at Reynolds, Mount Douglas and Mount View senior secondary schools, and Arbutus and Colquitz junior secondary schools, he said. Enrolment figures remain to be finalized.

Esquimalt senior secondary has also enrolled 80 more students than were expected, but the school has room to accommodate them, said Stavdal.

Despite the higher-than-expected enrolments, said Stavdal, total student population in the district is expected to decline this year.

Sooke school district's student population may go up by as much as 6 or 7 per cent this year, said assistant secretary-treasurer Ray Craig today.

This is about what the district expected, he said.

At Belmont-Fisher secondary school about 1,700 pupils registered Tuesday, up from 1,400 last year, said Craig.

Dunsmuir junior seconary is up by 90 students, he added.

Kindergarten population has stayed almost the same as last year, said Craig.

Saanich district's Beaver Lake elementary took a surprising jump from 128 pupils to 148 this year, said Elwood, but the school will be able to accommodate it.

Elwood said the increase may be the result of older homes in the area being sold to young families in the last few months.

REPRIEVE FOR DRIVER

QUESNEL (CP) — The federal department of immigration has given ambulance driver Mike Stanley, 26, of California another reprieve from deportation.

Stanley volunteered to drive the ambulance in this north-central British Columbia municipality last month after the former ambulance contractor resigned in a dispute over money. The young American was later hired to operate the town's new municipal ambulance.

Peggy Stanley said her husband was given a two-month work visa but permission was denied for a visa which would enable him to work until April 30, when the ambulance service is to be evaluated.

If Stanley is not granted immigrant status he will be deported. He is not eligible for admission under the illegal aliens amnesty program because he left Canada last November to attend school.

Court Ruling Today On M-B Injunction Bid

VANCOUVER (CP) — A union executive denied Tuesday that the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada Local 8 had issued any instructions for a shutdown at the Harmac plant near Nanaimo.

MacMillan Bloedel Industries Ltd. is seeking a British Columbia supreme court injunction against the local, claiming the union forced the closure of the pulp mill at Cedar.

Union president Budd Hehr, in an affidavit read by union lawyer G. F. Culhane, said the company's action in suspending one man and firing eight others made it impossible for the union to get men to go back to work.

Hehr also said there was extreme dissatisfaction with the conduct of the company in negotiations for a new collective agreement and that this, coupled with the suspension of one man, led to "an intolerable situation."

Mr. Justice T. R. Berger reserved judgment until today.

The mill, meanwhile remained closed today as 1,000 employees stayed away from work. No picketing is taking place.

POLICE HUNT FIREUBG

About five acres of Saanich and Oak Bay municipal parkland were ruined Tuesday when seven brush fires started in rapid succession on Mount Tolmie.

Reports that a car was seen in the areas where the blazes started lead police to believe the fires were set deliberately, although no one has been charged.

The first fire in a picnic area near Mayfair Drive was reported about 12:45 p.m. and Saanich and Oak Bay firemen worked for six hours before the last fire was brought under control.

The northwest, south and east sides of the park area were all damaged.

Camosun's Budget Uncut

A $5.5 million Camosun College provisional operating budget — 32 per cent higher than last year — was approved Tuesday night without a cent of trimming.

"It seems funny that we haven't been able to trim one item . . ." councillor Philip Ney told the college council meeting.

"In that respect we have failed most miserably."

Any budget paring should have been done at last week's finance committee meeting, councillor E. M. Moore responded. The committee deleted nothing from the budget.

"You're feeling guilty, Phil," said Moore.

"Awful," agreed Ney, who was at last week's meeting.

Finance committee chairman Walter Donald came to the defence of the budget, saying all the paring had been done by an efficient college administration.

College principal Dr. Grant Fisher said no budget cuts could have been made without affecting programs or services.

The council approved implementation of nine new programs for the college in 1974-75, but learned that this year may see the cancellation of some existing programs.

This is the year for the college's first three-year review of all programs to see if they are all still viable, said Fisher.

"I suspect in the near future we'll be looking hard, maybe deleting some programs," said Ney.

In other business council:

—Voted to join the faltering Association of Canadian Community College after a long debate on whether membership was worth the $600 fee and the bother involved.

"There seems to be a rather desperate need for support from the colleges if the association is to continue," Fisher said.

—Took no action on a request from the Victoria Labor Council to support establishment of a press council, but agreed to write and ask for more information on formation and purpose of such a council.

"I think that it reflects badly on the Victoria Labor Council that they would ask the college council to support establishment of a press council without detailing whom they would advise," said Donald.

Pembroke, has been charged with trafficking July 24 and will appear in court again later today.

John Bernard Garraway, 22, of no fixed address, was charged with two counts of trafficking — one on July 28, the other July 31. He will appear in court again Sept. 10. Garraway is already in custody on another charge.

James Clifford Reed, of no fixed address, was charged with trafficking in LSD July 13. Reed is also in custody on another matter and will appear in court again Sept. 12.

Undercover work in up-Island communities may result in as many as 20 arrests, RCMP in Nanaimo, Courtenay and Campbell River said today.

In Nanaimo, eight persons were arrested in pre-dawn raids and four other suspects are still being sought.

The eight were to appear in Nanaimo provincial court later today.

A police spokesman said up to 24 charges may be laid, mostly trafficking in heroin with three instances of trafficking in soft drugs.

Port Alberni RCMP said no one had yet been arrested.

A Campbell River RCMP spokesman said "several" people will appear in provincial court there later today on drug charges relating to the undercover work.

Those people were arrested Tuesday night and today, police said, and are now in custody.

In Courtenay, police said "three or four people" have been charged with trafficking in heroin and will also appear in court later today.

The charges all arose from the undercover work, police said.

consumers until Jan. 30 of next year, a control mechnism, such as an export tax or national oil marketing board, will be set up to stop U.S. price increases from flowing over into Canada and talks will begin with provinces and industry to bring Canadian oil to Montreal.

But the prime minister failed to announce measures to give the food prices review board power to order rollbacks in food prices or a program to cut back high mortgate interest rates as demanded by the New Democrats.

Even so, his announcements appeared to please NDP Leader David Lewis. He was so pleased, in fact, he spent almost as much time attacking Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield for advocating ineffectual across-the-board price and wage controls as he spent criticizing the shortcomins of the Liberals.

It was not the reaction of a party leader ready to pull the rug out from under the minority government even supposing he were given the opportunity.

For Trudeau made it clear that if the opposition parties want to defeat the Liberals on an issue during this special sitting of Parliament, called originally to deal with the rail strike, they will have to vote against the anti-inflationary, pro-consumer legislation.

The prime minister already has reserved to himself the right to decide when a defeat of a government measure means a vote of no-confidence in his administration and consequently cause for its resignation and another election.

ciation, called the Ottawa move "a political nightmare."

"The petroleum industry will have to ask for a meeting with Trudeau and Energy Minister Macdonald to clarify this whole mess."

He also said that if Ottawa tries to regulate petroleum prices by legislation, rather than by calls for voluntary moves, it will violate provincial jurisdictions over natural resources.

"Can the federal government tell the Ontario government what can be charged? What if Ontario wanted to raise taxes on oil? The retail price would have to go up and I don't see what Trudeau could do about it."

W. O. Twaits, chairman of Imperial Oil Ltd., said a price freeze will not increase the supply of petroleum products and will remove incentives for the development of other forms of energy.

Cameron said the proposed freeze could reduce the industry's ability to raise badly-needed "risk capital" used for exploration and development of new reserves because the potential profit margin would not be as attractive as before.

In reaction to other anti-inflationary moves an official of the Consumers Association of Canada in Toronto welcomed increases in subsidies for milk and bread producers — as long as recently announced price increases are rescinded.

Annette Turner, vice-president of the association said consumers will benefit from the subsidies only if milk price increases already planned are cancelled.

Increases in the price of bread have also been annouunced to take effect next month, and millers should not receive the subsidy unless the increases are rescinded, she added.

The freeze on petroleum products comes at a time when gasoline and heating fuel have reached a sudden peak, Mrs. Turner said, and the freeze might actually prevent downward trends on some products.

A spokesman for the B.C. branch of the Canadian Consumer Association reacted favorably to the announcements saying the subsidies were "long overdue."

Ada Brown said the 16,000-member organization has been pushing for government action to relieve pressure on consumers, especially those in the low-income brackets.

"It's a patchwork, piecemeal effort to meet the problem," she said, "but we're pleased that finally the government realizes the situation is serious."

B.C.'s deputy agriculture minister Sig Peterson said the department is viewing the announcements with "cautious optimism" but questioned the amount of the subsidy Ottawa is proposing to pay producers per quart of milk kept at present price levels.

The market's oil refining index was off 9.99 to 316.33 by 2 p.m.

At 2:45 the western oil index was off 5.27.

man said the trains could not be unloaded because no yardmen had reported to work.

The CN spokesman said the trains were moved to Vancouver to lessen the buildup on the Boston Bar yard since rail operations resumed in eastern British Columbia and the rest of Canada.

Tuesday night, a freight train and an engine with a caboose left Vancouver for Boston Bar, the first traffic out of the city on CN tracks since Aug. 23.

CN said it had no other trains scheduled to move today because, although most of the non-operating employees went back to work, the employees who operate the trains stayed off the job.

CP Rail had not scheduled any movement of freight or passenger trains to or from the coast and the company reported there was unlikely to be any.

At the New Westminster meeting only two workers voted to return.

Only a quarter of those attending the meeting of the joint council of railway workers were members of the Associated Non-Operating Railway Unions.

The meeting endorsed a resolution to remain off work on a day-to-day basis and plan another meeting for 11 a.m. PDT today.

The railway workers rejected a move to set up picket lines.

At Cranbrook, more than 200 CP Rail employees voted 97 per cent in favor of remaining off the job for at least another 24 hours. Another meeting was scheduled for today.

the weather

The protective ridge of high pressure across southern and central B.C. will keep skies generally clear and daytime temperatures warm for at least the next two days. However it will be a little cooler along the south coast Thursday as an onshore flow of Pacific air develops. Occasional rain or drizzle will persist over the north coast.

Two Soviet Dissenters 'Repent'

MOSCOW (AP) — In a move reminiscent of Stalin's show trials, Soviet authorities paraded two convicted dissenters at a news conference today to recant publicly their "anti-Soviet activity."

At the same time, a senior Soviet prosecutor warned that physicist Andrei Sakharov and Nobel prize novelist Alexander Solzhenitsyn may face court action because of their outspoken criticism of the regime. (See also page 5.)

Pyotr Yakir and Viktor Krasin told reporters they had damaged the Soviet state through their activities and promised to reform.

Yakir and Krasin were convicted at a closed trial in Moscow last week of spreading "anti-Soviet propaganda."

They were named as publishers of an underground journal which attempted to record official violations of human rights in the Soviet Union.

The two men, speaking in a monotone, said that from now on they would "work for the good of the Soviet state."

"If they beat me I will tell them anything. I know that from my experience in the camps. But you will know that it will not be the real me speaking."

When asked about this at the news conference, Yakir admitted that he had said it, but he "was surprised to learn that what I told someone in a private conversation was published in a newspaper."

In an opening statement, which seemed to have been memorized, Yakir said his 14-month pre-trial investigation was "very correct".

He also said reports he had recanted under pressure were "not true."

Appearing with Yakir and Krasin were Mikhail Malyarov, first deputy prosecutor, Vsevolod Sofinsky, chief of the foreign ministry press department, and two other officials, unidentified. The officials screened written questions from the floor.

One of the questions was:

"Where is the campaign against Sakharov going to lead?"

The father of the Soviet H-bomb has been the object of a country-wide campaign of vilification since he warned the West in a news conference last month against accepting detente on Soviet terms.

Malyarov, the prosecutor, replied:

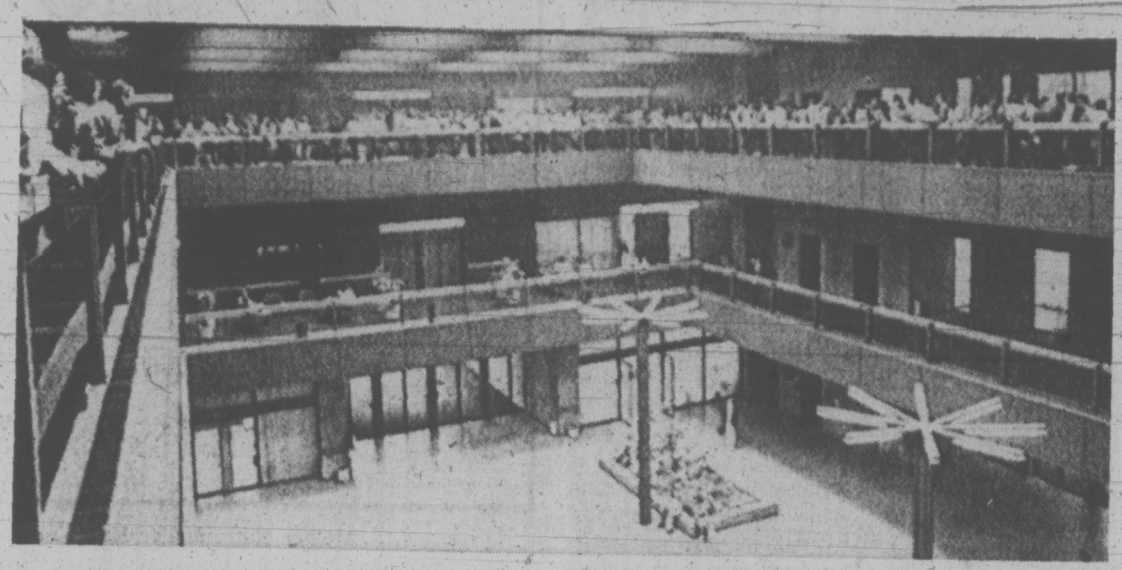

"No citizen is immune from prosecution. I called him (Sakharov) in and warned him about his activities. People like Sakharov, Solzhenitsyn and others must be held responsible for their actions.

"They should remember what the state has done for them and that they are Soviet citizens. They are trying to cut down the tree whose fruit they have been eating, and eating quite well."

It was the strongest indication to date that the authorities might be planning to put Sakharov—and possibly Solzhenitsyn—on trial.

In general, what Yakir and Krasin had to say closely resembled what the Soviet press reported from the closed trial.

The trial began Aug. 27 and ended last Saturday when the defendants were sentenced to three years in prison.

A 'RIGHT' TO BUG

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Secret Service maintains it has the right to record telephone calls to the White House as a means of protecting the president, without letting the caller know.

The Secret Service claim came in response to a complaint filed with the Federal Communications Commission against the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. and the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. by Robert E. McCann of Hillsborough, Calif.

The electrical engineer charged that a phone call to the White House he made last October complaining about the president's Vietnam policy was recorded without a "beeper" warning, as required by FCC rules. He said a man identifying himself as a Secret Service agent told him "we record all incoming calls."

A Secret Service spokesman Tuesday denied such a response was made to McCann, but said that the agency has been granted an exemption from the beeper requirement.

The spokesman said police and fire departments are also exempt, and that the Secret Service records calls "only if they pertain to threats to any person or property, or bomb threats."

Attorneys for the Secret Service said the phone companies had been advised that security responsibilities "take priority over the tariff requirements regarding customer recording of telephone conservations" if they are in conflict.

The lawyers said that after the senate Watergate Committee heard testimony about existence of taps on White House telephones, the companies had sent the White House a letter "concerning compliance with tariff provisions" and received a reply that the taps had been removed.

Air Talks On Again

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canadian and American officials resumed private negotiations at the state department late Tuesday in an effort to conclude an agreement covering airline traffic between the two countries.

Neither side would estimate how long the negotiations are likely to go on, although at least three or four days of talks seem probable.

At stake are the distribution of cross-border air routes among Canadian and United States airlines as well as a system of preclearance customs facilities for passengers.

Both countries hope the current round of talks will be the final now. There have been 11 previous meetings in the last four years, seeking to amend an agreement signed in 1966.

The current session is being carried on in two sections, with one group of negotiators discussing air routes and the other the knotty problem of preclearance.

Canada is seeking a more equitable share of current passenger traffic, with both countries also negotiating to expand air services to cities which have no direct flights now.

On preclearance, Ottawa has set a Sept. 10 deadline for closing U.S. customs facilities at four Canadian airports unless agreement is reached on a new system of preclearance that includes some Canadian customs posts in the U.S., and unless agreement is reached on air routes.

A Plea for Justice

Close to 700 persons jam a fifth-floor corridor in the Montreal Justice Building chanting "we want in" and "we want justice" in a bid to have their trial dates set. Group showed up at 10 a.m. Tuesday as ordered in summonses but had to wait outside for two hours as persons held in jail pending trial were processed. Extra security guards were called in but the demonstration remained mostly vocal. A pregnant woman fainted and was treated at hospital. A shortage of session court judges led to backlog of cases.

No Turn of the Tide

Prime Minister Trudeau's latest list of anti-inflationary proposals proves to be along the same lines as his previous one — that is, the government's policy is still designed to soothe the sufferers of inflation rather than to remove the cause of their suffering. Pension increases, larger family allowances, subsidies for milk and bread — these are inflationary moves in themselves, but paradoxically will help the victims of inflation to meet the rising costs that surround them. Annually increasing salaries and wages do the same for the working population, so that the government is merely keeping in step with the trend of today.

In view of the international causes of inflation and the global extent of its roots and its burden, it is difficult to blame any single country for an inability to master the malady, and this should be as true for Canada as for Britain, the United States, Japan, France, West Germany and any of the other nations so afflicted. Mr. Trudeau's policy of making the illness comfortable for people to bear therefore has logic of a sort.

That logic, unfortunately, does not embrace any reasoning that would bring an end to inflation. Where once it was argued by some economists that a small, regular inflation was beneficial to the economy of a nation, it now is apparently being accepted in legislative circles that rapidly escalating prices and costs are to be considered as normal.

With this concept there is coupled a hope that sometime, somehow, it will all slow down or halt. But it is very difficult to perceive any indication of this, particularly as the ameliorative measures themselves contribute to the upward spiral. Where subsidies are concerned, citizens are billed for increased costs as taxpayers paying taxes rather than as consumers paying prices.

The political trend of the government's actions seems as indeterminate as its inflationary philosophy. NDP Leader Lewis appears to be calling many notes of the policy tune, but Mr. Trudeau says that the art of government lies as much in the timing as in the content of legislation — the implication being that the government would have initiated the current "anti-inflationary" policies without NDP insistence. That is doubtful, but it is nothing new in Canadian politics for one party to take over policies proposed by another party — in fact, over the long run, it is almost routine.

The Liberals, while not appearing as a strong government, are making the most of their minority position. They will get credit for the social hand-out programs they are espousing. The NDP may get some credit for insisting on these as the price of its voting support, but this is not likely to increase the party's seats correspondingly. The Conservatives have shown little elasticity or initiative in policy-making. Mr. Stanfield plays the same record — advocating price and wage controls with a time limit — over and over, but it has now lost impact in the light of other countries' largely unsuccessful experiences.

Mr. Trudeau's proposal to control gasoline and fuel oil prices for a while could be construed as a departure from his price policy, but he defines this as a special situation and the proposed control as a measure to protect Canadian oil prices from pressure originating in rising United States oil prices. That is "selective" treatment, as Mr. Trudeau describes it. But the general picture of Ottawa today gives a feeling that as regards inflation the whole Parliament is marking time rather than marching. None of the parties seems to have a destination marked on its map.

Lazyman's West Coast Trail

Laudable foresight has been shown by the provincial government in considering the possibility of using the 82-mile Canadian National Railway right-of-way between Victoria and Youbou as a hiking and cycling route. The largely unused route borders Sooke, Shawnigan and Cowichan Lakes in part, providing a unique, leisurely way to see Vancouver Island — if the Sooke Lake reservoir problem can be solved.

The possibility that the Sooke-Victoria section might some day provide a rapid transit route is reason enough for the government to try and secure the route before it is grabbed up or allowed to decay.

The gradual railway grades would be ideal for hikers and cyclists — a lazyman's West Coast trail perhaps? But if the government secures the route that is when the clamor will begin. Horsemen, motorcyclists, hikers and cyclists, not to mention some of the more strange recreational vehicles which abound, will all want to use the route.

But while all these means of transportation are not compatible, the rail line itself fits in with the philosophy of Vancouver Island. Most people will hope that the government can negotiate an early agreement with the CNR that will ensure the public right-of-way.

There's No Place Like Home

Greater Victorians, complacently surveying the backyards, front porches, parks and beaches where they can relax in comfort, untroubled by extremes of temperature, might spare a moment of sympathy for the residents of New York City. In that metropolis, which was once the goal of many thousands of people, life apparently lacks some of the advantages to be found elsewhere. In fact, it lacks some of the bare essentials — clean air, clean water and a comfortable temperature.

News accounts tell of a current ordeal, in which the strain on the electricity supply caused by a heat spell caused a power failure that blacked out nearly 200,000 people in one part of the city. The temperature was 98 and it was very humid. These conditions resulted in the normal smog being trapped in the muggy streets, so that breathing became difficult for New Yorkers on buses and benches.

The drain on power caused by abnormal use of electrical coolers forced another five per cent cut in voltage from the turbines. And to cap everything, a pollen count of 46 was recorded, highest in a year and bringing misery to thousands of hayfever and asthma sufferers.

Reading of that, can Victorians remember what it was they were complaining about?

CHARLES BARTLETT

Much More Than Magpies

SINTRA, Portugal — There may be encouragement for Richard Nixon in the experience of an early Portuguese king, John I, who was caught by his wife in the act of kissing a lady in the antechamber of the huge palace that hangs over this medieval town.

"It's all for the best," the surprised king exclaimed to the annoyed queen, and while his remark bore little relevance to the situation, it was his family motto — apparently the only words which came into his mind. History records that Queen Philippa was amused and mollified by this unlikely defence.

However, reports of the incident drifted to the court and the king was soon embarrassed by a lively cackle of gossip. To put an end to it, he had an artist paint 146 magpies, one for each lady of the court, on the ceiling of the room in which his kiss was interrupted. Near the beak of each magpie, the artist inscribed the words: "It's all for the best."

Similar Tack

Mr. Nixon has taken a similar tack. He is painting those who press the Watergate issues as magpies who exploit the matter to keep him from doing his job. He is out to bury the moral implications and factual ambiguities of Watergate in the reluctance of Americans to impale their progress and prospects on a single political scandal .He is banking on the public's anxiety to get on with the business of government.

But Mr. Nixon's magpies will be less easily chastened than the ladies of the Sintra court. This is because the revealed facts still fail to fit a logical pattern. The "knew nothing, saw nothing, did nothing" depictions of Mr. Nixon do not conform to the widely rooted impressins of a president who was avidly involved in all phases of his re-election campaign.

The brilliance attributed to the president by his associates does not lend reality to testimony that he showed virtually no curiosity about what happened and who was involved, in his early conversations with those closest to the facts, particularly John Mitchell, John Dean and Patrick Gray. The difficulties which he describes in learning the facts of the case increasingly hint at a self-imposed ignorance.

PATRICK GRAY
. . . implication of error

"I then believed in the rectitude of the administration," Gray testified and his implication of error in this assessment is widely shared. A sense that the administration conducted its chicanery under a premise that all Nixon aides were expendable except the president, Robert Haldeman, and John Ehrlichman will not deepen the assurance that justice has been done when some lesser officials go to jail.

Those who attribute a vengeful nature to the president noted Gray's recollection that Mr. Nixon told him, "We'll have another chance to get back at our enemies." This does not increase the eagerness to help him regain the momentum of his presidency. This is not partisanship but an instinct to avoid further damage from the ruthless spirit of a climate for which the president has said he takes full responsibility.

Not Easily Silenced

So Mr. Nixon's magpies are not going to be easily silenced. It may be that the president can use his pulpit to rally sentiment against them. Mr. Nixon may recapture his popularity despite them because it is not, as Machiavelli noted, necessary for a leader to have all the virtues so long as he appears to have them.

President Nixon will not, as John Connally said, change his character, but he can change his style, replacing the aloofness of de Gaulle with the open, direct ways Americans prefer in their leaders. He can, with Henry Kissinger's help, rouse enthusiasm for the delicate and important diplomacy which lies ahead in Europe.

Mr. Nixon is now doing what he can do to put a lid on the Watergate tempest. But he is dealing with a situation with many more complexities and loose ends than the one handled here by King John.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Bus Service

Much has appeared recently in the press regarding the improvements of public transit systems as a means of encouraging people to limit pollution of cities by their automobiles. Having recently returned to the Island from a trip to many cities in Europe and having experienced what service really means, may I offer these observations on public transit in Victoria:

It would appear that those using the transit sytem in Victoria must be presumed to arrive at the bus stops either by car or walking among the cars in the direction of the flow of traffic; the only signs indicating the placing of bus stops face the vehicle traffic and then face only oncoming traffic. Pedestrians are apparently totally ignored from the point of view of these signs.

Furthermore, the signs blend perfectly in with the plethora of other signs (directed at cars): No Parking, Commercial Zone, No Stopping, etc. Surely, a distinctive color, or shape, or both, together with the number or final destination of the bus should not be beyond the capabilities of the transit company?

Perhaps Victorians know by instinct, but a tourist or other non-resident is not only frustrated but is not likely to opt for the bus if the car is available. A notice about "exact fare: 25 cents only" might not be amiss either. If the bus drivers are unable to make correct change, this further lack of public service might at least be communicated to the unsuspecting potential passenger. — Jens Gotthardt, Cobble Hill, B.C.

Pot Holes

A lifelong cyclist, I have a sturdy bicycle with large tires. But they are in no way sufficient to lessen the shock and jolt one receives in encountering one of the many pot holes which abound in Victoria's lesser streets. For example, take the east end of Michigan Street between Government and Douglas, here the road is very bad with very many pot holes. An extremely dangerous hazard to the many young cyclists (some with 10-speed bikes difficult to handle) and with small tires going to South Park Elementary School.

Cars are allowed to park on both sides of this short stretch of road. Why? Have we to wait for a serious accident to occur before action is taken? Parents should ask City Hall what they are doing.

High-rise and other apartment buildings pay high taxes, surely we can afford to keep city roads in a decent state of repair. Aldermen with high emoluments and most with lucrative businesses as well, can easily afford luxurious cars which will spray humble pedestrians with mud and water as they squirt water from these pot holes. Our hard-working newspaper carriers should also be considered. These boys do a fine job with heavily laden bicycles, especially on the coming dark mornings. Let's take care of them.

I am asking parents to closely examine the neighborhood streets, especially near schools, and call the City Hall or the alderman if they know who is responsible for city paving. We want immediate action. — John Kenny, P.O. Box 84.

What Do We Do?

Again the question arises of the right of persons serving in essential services to strike. It is said such people should be in a special classification. Well, indeed they are. They are the most oppressed group of union workers in existence.

Back in the twelve hundreds the same problem plagued leaders. This problem resulted in what might be called the first "Dear John" letter, the Magna Carta. In my slight understanding of politics this forced John to give the serfs at least something to eat, somewhere decent to live and a nickel left over for the Saturday movie.

Look at the situation today. The average wage of the railworker is $3.45 per hour. The company has offered 7 per cent. This brings their wages up to the staggering sum of $3.69 per hour. Five years ago we were informed that anyone making less than $6,000 per year (a family of four) was living in poverty. So what, you say . . . these people have the right to strike and improve their conditions . . . but they don't. They have the right to strike only until a few screamers (probably heavy campaign contributors) tell the government this is a national emergency (we're losing a couple of bucks) and must stop.

Okay, what did we do about it? Force the unions into the position of defying the law by ordering them back to work. (Remember this is how all unjust laws were repealed.) If the country decides this is the answer to the problem, then indeed we are in for a very trying period. Many of us who are bound by the so-called "essential services" section as are our fellow workers, are apt to feel a very deep kindred sympathy to their plight and would take a very dim view of any action that would incarcerate or place them in any circumstance of less stature than our own.

Why not take a different tack? Why not set a wage that is consistent with union transport workers across the country? I submit to you, that most everyone else in the transportation field is making a profit . . . and at the same time paying a decent living wage to their workers. Why not the railways? — J. A. Craig, 335 Walter Ave.

Responsibility

I realize that letter-writing will not solve the problem of human suffering. The liberation of the human spirit lies beyond the realm of politics and social reform. However, a man's freedom to pursue that liberation depends upon the quality of the world he inhabits. Outrageous acts and gross indecency must be suppressed by the fair-minded in order to maintain a habitable world.

In an international community, acts, so wilful and irresponsible as the French nuclear tests in the South Pacific, cannot be tolerated. Furthermore, when a non-military vessel on a peaceful mission is seized in international waters, and its crew members are subjected to abduction and brutal treatment in an extension of that same arrogance, that also cannot be tolerated. Furthermore, if, in the face of sworn statements, torn flesh, and recently revealed photographic evidence, the French government refuses to offer even an apology, then there is no choice but to act. All commercial and diplomatic relations with France should then be suspended.

This should not be in the spirit of revenge, but in support of international law. For only when these kinds of measures become widely accepted and used in the world community will nations begin to consider their actions in terms of international responsibility. — A. Duart Maclean, 3—1326 Yates St.

Pay the Piper

The civil service demands for increases, whether justifiable or not we will never know, as there was no public discussion to examine into it, and now the ferry strike also. The strikers get more, the taxpayers get less.

However, if I were a labor union man I would feel a little uneasy. It is not always good to get everything one wants. Fairy godmothers or fathers always seem to have a little kicker in reserve. One can get one's wages so high there will have to be a reduction in staff or more work performed for the money. Sometimes, as in the private field where there is no angel taxpayer to foot the bill, one finds one's services less in demand due to rates people cannot afford.

In the longer range, unions will not be needed, as Big Brother will not want to have a rival in the happy task of giving goodies to everyone. There is no need for unions in a socialist world and they will be just vassals of the state with no power except to rubberstamp decisions made by Big Brother.

In the meantime, Joe Doakes must just tighten his belt and prepare to pay whatever the unions decide he must. — M. P. PAINE, 3620 Quadra St.

Solution

North Island Gazette

The provincial government is looking for ways to increase ferry service between the mainland and Vancouver Island. One idea held by Highways Minister Bob Strachan is to establish an Island terminus at Gabriola Island rather than Departure Bay. The change, he has said, would result in a saving of one hour in the sailing time to and from Vancouver and would make it possible for twice as many trips a day per boat and would eliminate long waiting periods at both ends.

The government's efforts have come in response to demands from travellers who aren't able to get to the Island just when they want to. But what will be the ultimate result to bowing to the demands?

The roads on the Island, already pressed beyond their capacity, will have to be further enlarged and extended. As they are able to handle more people, more people will fill them. Still other people will have to be brought in to provide the services demanded, with the result that the ferries will soon be filled to capacity again, and the schedules will have to be stepped up to handle the loads and the roads will have to be rebuilt. . .

A hint as to a possible solution comes from a comparison between the Victoria Day and July 1 weekends. On the earlier holiday, all ferry terminals were jammed and many travellers had to wait for several hours before they could get on board a ship. On the later weekend, however, things were much better. It would seem that a great many people, realizing that their chances of getting to and from the Island weren't too good, chose to go elsewhere.

Can the answer, then, be to leave things the way they are rather than taking steps that can only compound the problem? How necessary is it that everybody and his brother be able to get on or off the Island whenever the whim hits them? It doesn't seem necessary, even from the point of economics that the Island be covered with asphalt and matted with people in order that we may survive.

(B.C. Government Employee's Union Publication)

If there is no counter, there can be no over-the-counter service to the public.

The manager of a provincial government office in a remote centre in B.C. followed this line of reasoning in response to a Civil Service Commission order that all offices providing service "over the counter" to the public would have to open during noon hour.

An informed source (another employee in the office) reports that the manager applied a sledge hammer and crow bar to the office counter with such vigor that soon there was no counter over which to serve the public.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of September 5, 1913

The race for the blue ribbon of the Pacific has begun. When the magnificent CPR liner, the Empress of Russia, made her first visit to this port it was freely predicted that she and her sister ship would revolutionize mercantile marine conditions on the ocean. Today the Times learns that the Osaka Shosen Kaisha is about to order the construction of three trans-Pacific vessels equal in size to the Empress and half a knot faster. In the meantime two twenty knot liners from the Japanese merchant navy are to be operated on this route. We expected the splendid enterprise of Canada's largest transportation company would arouse the competitive spirit of its rivals, but not so fast.

HOW CAN DETENTE BE MAINTAINED?

Soviet Dissidents a Problem for West

By ROBERT G. KAISER

MOSCOW — For nearly two years, the Soviet Union's political police have been trying to stamp out the last remnants of active intellectual opposition to the regime. Much of their work proceeded quietly and efficiently. But in the last few weeks a remarkable coincidence of events has put the Soviets' campaign against dissidence at the centre of international attention, vividly revealing one of the weak links in the new system of detente that East and West are jointly building.

Just during August, the Soviet image suffered these embarassments: outbursts of apparently official anti-Semitism at the world university games in Moscow; bitter denunciations of the Soviet system by Alexander I. Solzhenitsyn, probably the single best-known Soviet citizen in the outside world; defiant public statements from Andrei D. Sakharov, principal developer of the Soviet hydrogen bomb and another nonconformist intellectual whose fame assures wide publicity for his statements; international protests against the new three-year labor camp sentence for writer Andrei Amalrik; and unfavorable publicity associated with the sudden removal of Soviet citizenship from Zhores A. Medvedev, an internationally known biologist.

A political trial in Moscow last week, which the Soviets were deliberately publicizing, has also drawn international attention to the campaign against dissidence.

Each of these events is tied to the security forces' attempts to wipe out the active dissidents, a campaign which the Soviets regard as an internal matter.

"The state has the right to defend itself," one of the Soviet Union's senior law officers told Andrei Sakharov a fortnight ago, a message that Soviet officials repeat in private conversations with foreigners. We have our own customs and traditions, and our own way of dealing with troublemakers, they say, and foreigners have no right to question us about them.

Yet foreigners do question them, and the Soviet authorities have recognized the connection between their domestic policies and international detente. The connection is acknowledged in Soviet replies to foreign critics.

For example, in response to numerous documented accusations that Soviet mental hospitals are used for the forcible treatment of dissidents, the government news agency Tass recently carried an interview with a Soviet professor of psychiatry. Disputing foreign criticisms, the professor said that "hired anti-Soviets obligingly spread these lies to please the circles which are interested in poisoning the international atmosphere and in preventing further detente."

Such comments represent a recognition that detente can be hindered if foreigners object to aspects (real or imagined) of Soviet internal policy.

In recent days the Soviets have mounted a propaganda offensive to respond to their critics. The responses, like that of the professor of psychiatry, often consist primarily of attacks on the accusers.

Another common response is a blanket denial. For instance, Tass simply denied that there were any displays of anti-Semitism at the university games, though these outbursts were witnessed by numerous foreigners, and one act was photographed.

Another form of reply is to blame manifestations of domestic dissidence on foreigners. This line emerged from the political trial of Pyotr Yakir and Viktor Krassin last week.

The speed and strength of recent Soviet replies to foreign and domestic critics confirms that their criticism is taken seriously. The question remains how the Soviets will respond to it.

The current leadership has shown an unprecedented willingness to react constructively to some foreign pressure. The best example of this is the decision to allow thousands of Soviet Jews to emigrate, a decision that would have been inconceivable without foreign pressure.

Yet the same leadership has decided that relaxation of tensions with the West must be accompanied by the strictest ideological orthodoxy at home (a decision that has led to the crackdown on dissidents.)

There are hints of a dispute inside the leadership on ideological issues. Leonid I. Brezhnev, general secretary of the Communist Party, said in a speech last month that he welcomed a freer exchange of people and ideas with the West, because this would win "more supporters for the ideas of scientific communism."

This confident approach to a sensitive subject has not appeared in any other official Soviet statement before or after Brezhnev's speech. A few days after he spoke, Pravda published an authoritative article ignoring Brezhnev's formulation and reimposing the familiar Soviet position that any exchange of people and ideas must respect the laws and customs of all countries — meaning specifically, censorship in the Soviet Union.

Whether these clues indicate a debate or two sides of the same coin isn't known.

In any case, discussions about vague notions like the freer exchange of people and ideas can't cover the difficult, specific problems the Soviet leaders now face. The most obvious of these is what to do with two world-famous Soviet citizens, Solzhenitsyn and Sakharov, whose statements command enormous attention.

Are they to be stamped out too? Or would the outcry abroad that would certainly follow any repression of them jeopardize more important causes, like the detente policy? Is that policy already threatened by western reaction to the suppression of nonconformists in the Soviet Union?

The Soviets may feel that they can, in the Washington phrase, tough it out. The western countries may well decide that it is preferable to acquiesce to Soviet domestic policies and sacrifice the tiny handful of dissidents, if trying to defend them would jeopardize the new and favorable international atmosphere.

Moreover, even the most indignant Westerners can have trouble finding ways to pressure Moscow. One astute Westerner here asked, "What are they going to do, say we won't sell you our computers unless you release Andrei Amalrik?" That doesn't sound like a very plausible formula.

Nor, if the West is trying to nudge the Soviet Union out of its historic isolation, is it necessarily desirable to pressure the country's leaders to change their historic attitude toward non-conformists at the same time.

The Soviet word for dissidents translates literally as "those who think differently." Differently from what? That question hasn't been asked in Russia for years, neither under the czars nor under their successors.

Kissinger: A Deep Cynicism About Power

By WILLIAM V. SHANNON

The nomination of Henry Kissinger as Secretary of State enables President Nixon to hold out to his critics the pretense of reform.

After four years of ruthless war, secret bombing and false reports, of shameless deceit of ordinary citizens and open contempt for the constitutional authority of Congress, of crafty manipulation of the press and wiretapping of his own staff, after all these brutalities, illegalities, and deceits, Mr. Nixon now suggests that he has found a new Secretary of State who will conduct a foreign policy founded upon democratic candor and Congressional co-operation.

But who has been Nixon's closest confidant in compiling this foreign policy record? The same Kissinger. It is some rough measure of Kissinger's fondness of power and his deep cynicism about how power is obtained and wielded that he should lend himself to this mockery. It is a very good measure of our credulity as citizens if we passively accept this latest Nixonian deception.

Kissinger's energy, intelligence, practical shrewdness, and worldly charm are not in doubt. But, leaving aside the charm, the same qualities belong to President Nixon. Yet they have only served to bring the nation to its pesent constitutional and moral crisis.

What is lacking in both the president and his chief foreign policy advisor are ethical restraint in the exercise of power and innate respect for constitutional order. There is no reason to believe that the Nixon-Kissinger operation will be any different in the next four years than it has been in the last four.

Despite rosy rumors being floated, the State Department will remain a depressed area. Wistful hopes in this regard clash with known facts. Kissinger is an intellectual elitist. He is a superlatively bad organizer who has had difficulties running his small National Security Council staff. He covets power and knows that in a bureaucracy, knowledge is power.

These facts suggest that he will surround himself with a small, trusted staff, spend a lot of time at the White House making sure he does not lose the president's ear, and most of the State Department will remain as ignorant and uninvolved in high policy as it is now.

Kissinger's relations with the press are not to be affected by his change of title. He has already demonstrated that he can dominate a press conference and can lunch with a correspondent, banter witticisms, feed him a self-serving mixture of true tidbits and misleading hints, and wiretap him all in the same day. But reporting is an intellectually dangerous trade, and reporters are accustomed to being used by their sources just as they strive to use them.

★ ★ ★

More serious is Kissinger's manipulation of the Senate, for senators, unlike correspondents, do not report on power; they are intended by the Constitution to share in it. Where key senators are involved, Kissinger has already shown himself the master of the confidential chat, the urgent Sunday morning telephone call, the whispered confidence. If he becomes Secretary, he can be expected to intensify his skilled efforts to get leading senators to trade their better judgment for the dubious satisfaction of being "insiders."

Before Kissinger is confirmed, however, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has a duty to ask him some searching questions. The most urgent queries are not about executive privilege. Members of Congress need not worry about Kissinger invoking it. Where he is concerned, they run a greater risk from what the Irish regard as the most artful kind of silence — an excess of volubility.

The Senate, recalling this administration's duplicitous conduct during the India-Pakistan war, might well explore with Kissinger to what extent he thinks the government should profess to its own people that is neutral in a foreign war when, in fact, it is "tilting" to one side.

In the light of this administration's secret bombing and subsequent "incursion" into Cambodia, the Senate should find out if Kssinger thinks there are any limits to the president's capacity to carry on war-like activities.

Recalling that David Young, the deputy head of the White House "plumbers," was previously Kissinger's appointment secretary and trusted aide, the Senate could ask whether Kissinger received any information as a result of the plumbers' operations.

What knowledge does he have of other illegal activities since 1969? What part did he play in formulating the administration's revision of the Federal Criminal Code, a revision that could have made it a crime for any government employee to give or any newspaperman to receive a government document, classified or unclassified.

The Senate has a duty to try to contain the Nixon-Kissinger operation within Constitutional bounds. In the pursuit of that stern duty, individual senators must keep their distance and not allow their vanity or sense of self-importance to be played upon the way a virtuoso plays a violin.

WASHINGTON'S INDEPENDENT GOVERNOR

A Need for Messy Beards

By DAVID S. BRODER

WASHINGTON — Sometimes a small gesture tells you more about the character of a politician than thousands of words. This is a report on one such gesture, insignificant in itself, and the fairly large point it makes.

The politician is Daniel J. Evans, the governor of Washington. Evans is one of those fellows perpetually on the verge of becoming a presidential prospect — serious, competent, good looking, young (47), partisan enough to have keynoted the 1968 Republican convention but independent enough to have won three terms in a normally Democratic state.

To be a governor and a westerner is to have the Washington-oriented media deck doubly stacked against you. So it was fairly crucial for whatever national ambitious Evans may harbor that his appearances here last week (as new chairman of the national governors' conference) on NBC's Today Show and at the National Press Club go well.

What does he do but show up with a beard! Not a magnificent, well-barbered creation, but the sort of scraggly, dappled, uneven brush that thousands of American males grow during summer vacation — which is exactly when Evans grew his.

In Character

It was the sort of to-hell-with-it gesture which no public relations man would have permitted, had he been asked. Presidential hopefuls just don't suddenly sprout shrubbery. Evans' old friend, Ex-Gov. John Love of Colorado, took one look at it and said, "Dan, if you're running for president you're 100 years too late."

Those who know Evans appreciate that the gesture is not out of character for him. Despite a boy scout earnestness about his work, he leads a vigorous, full, private family life in the woods and mountains of Washington. Any pretensions to grandeur by the governor are firmly squelched by his wife, Nancy, who can show him up at the bridge table and almost anywhere else, and by three young sons who refuse to play "the governor's children," even to the point of mismatched socks in the family christmas card picture.

But the beard expresses more than Evans' casual attitude toward his own image. It also symbolizes his plea that all politicians — even presidents — be given room to live their private lives and indulge their private whims on the ordinary human plane.

A Prisoner

"In my view," Evans said at the Press Club, "there is nothing more essential than that the president of the United States be given the opportunity to see and be seen — personally and informally — by the people . . . the modern-day tragedy of the presidency is that he is quite literally the prisoner of Pennsylvania Avenue."

As if to illustrate the governor's point, President Nixon found himself last week in an angry dispute with the press corps over his desire to slip out of the Western White House without advance notice to the newsmen.

Go for Walk

Why shouldn't the president be able to go out for a spin on the freeways or a walk on the streets by himself? Reporters reply, of course, that their job is to be on hand to record an accident or incident that may occur. Evans, on the other hand, argues that the public's interest in such coverage should give way to the "essential" need for the chief executive to "get out and talk with the people face to face," without the barrier of hovering cameramen and notebook-bearing reporters.

Main Street Missed

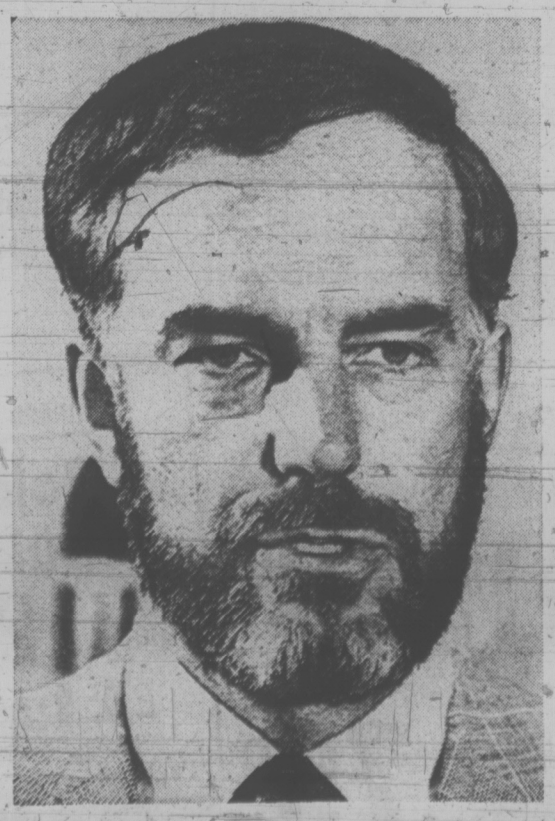

"Whether it is a presidential press conference or a senatorial hearing, it is presented as a combination of the sinking of the Titanic, the last days of Pompeii and going over Niagara Falls in a barrel," he said. "Interesting as these incidents may be, they hardly represent the day-to-day ebb and flow of life."

Evans argues that it is unhealthy for both the president and his press corps to move from one compound to another, from San Clemente to Key Biscayne to the White House, without ever touching down and exploring Main Street America.

He is right to ask whether it would not be good for everyone's morale to have a president who walked the streets of Washington or his home town as casually as Harry Truman did, and held press conferences which produced "no noteworthy news." Such a president would be a living, daily reminder that America's strength and stability is not measured by the frantic gyrations of this capital.

It is a message worth flying across the country to deliver, made more credible by the fact that it comes from one politician who has managed to find that elusive balance in his own life, a potential presidential aspirant who is not too up-tight to grow a really awful-looking beard.

Doman Looking to Japan As Profits Shoot Higher

By Al Forrest
Times Business Editor

Doman Industries Ltd. has diverted more than 50 per cent of its lumber production to Japan and Europe because of higher prices there, president Herb Doman said today.

With the diversion in sales, the company expects to have a successful fourth quarter, he said.

Doman was commenting on third quarter results showing net earnings of $3.8 million — compared to $1.6 million a year ago — for the nine months ended July 31.

The company had exported 90 per cent of its lumber to the United States but now less than half would go there because of the unstable market.

Doman said the company could be assured of higher prices over a longer period of time in the offshore markets.

While the price of lumber had risen in the past two weeks in the U.S. it was still below other export prices and was erratic.

Earnings for the current nine months represent $1.21 per share as against 56 cents per share at July 31, 1972. The 56 cents figure is restated, accounting for last spring's 2 for 1 split.

Total net earnings in the previous fiscal year were 12.2 million.

Company sales at the three-quarter mark were $30.5 million — compared to $18.8 million — and were higher than the total sales of the previous fiscal year which amounted to $26.3 million.

Export of wood products accounts for about 50 per cent of the company's revenue.

Other sources of income include retail sales of building supply materials, ready mix concrete, trucking and land development.

Doman said the company had been pleased with all aspects of its operations except for the instability of the U.S. lumber market.

High mortgage rates and the resulting decline in housing starts were producing downward pressure on prices.

There were temporary aberations because of wood shortages in the United States, creating the present upward trend in U.S. lumber prices, but no evidence of stability.

The train strikes and a North American shortage of boxcars had led to the present price increases. The U.S. price might sag again with the restoration of rail services.

Doman said the prospects for offshore markets were very bright with a general world shortage of wood products.

Canadians can compete for the market advantageously because of the lower dollar against Japanese and European currencies, creating lower, competitive prices in both these major markets.

Won at International Expositions held throughout the world for over 40 years.

In 1846, John Dewar went into business for himself as a spirit merchant at 111 High Street, Perth, Scotland.

Special, because the single whiskies are not shocked by being dumped together at once. We let them rest quietly awhile, so that the blend will have greater uniformity and more dependable consistency.

In this Scottish city, on the banks of the River Tay, nothing much has changed. The castle is still there, and every year, from January to December, when the air is chill and pure and the water is cold, the people of Perth make Dewar's Scotch Whisky.

Son Tommy Dewar looked for new markets at the 1885 Brewer's Show and used a bagpipe to entertain. (The first commercial use of music?)

Sir Thomas Dewar became famous for such terse comments as, "Do right and fear no man; don't write and fear no woman".

DEATH PHOTO OF HIS SON

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — A newspaper photographer took pictures of a five-car collision near here but didn't learn until he returned to the office that his son was one of the two persons killed in the crash.

Steven Dean, 17, of Plymouth, and Antonio Prada, 5, of Avon died in the collision Monday. Dean was the son of Boston Globe photographer Robert Dean.

Police said 15 other persons were injured in the crash.

"Use that picture," he told the editor. "If it can save the life of somebody's kid, it will be worth it. Please use the picture."

Priest Faces Jail Term

MUNICH — A Roman Catholic priest faces possible jail for refusing to identify a man who confessed to sending bombs to Chancellor Willy Brandt and other West German leaders.

A spokesman for the Bavarian state prosecutor said today that action will probably be taken against Rev. Richard Schneider, 57, under a provision which enables authorities to detain for up to six months anyone who withholds information.

Father Schneider said today: "I would stay in jail until the end of time rather than break my priestly oath."

LOS ANGELES — Actress Cybill Shepherd sued Playboy Enterprises, Inc., for $9-million Tuesday, claiming Playboy Magazine published two semi-nude photographs of her without her consent.

Miss Shepherd, 23, alleged the photographs, which appeared in the November and December, 1972, editions of the magazine, were clipped from frames of "The Last Picture Show."

The suit alleged publication of the photos invaded Miss Shepherd's property rights and her professional image as "a young woman of dignity, intelligence, modesty and artistic and personal integrity."

WASHINGTON — George Meany thinks the American working man has barely broken even in the five years of Richard Nixon's presidency while employers "never had it so good."

He thinks the country is headed into a recession, thinks that "as of now" Nixon will go down as "one of our poorest presidents," and wishes wage and price controls would disappear tomorrow.

The 79-year-old president of the AFL-CIO has come to think there is too much money in politics, would like to see congress limit how much candidates can spend.

HONG KONG — A coroner said today Chinese-American film star Bruce Lee probably died of a brain edema and that it may have been brought on by marijuana.

Opening the inquest into the death of the 33-year-old Kung Fu star July 20, coroner C. K. E. Tung explained that a brain edema is a swelling caused by an excess of fluid in portions of the brain.

BUTCHART GARDENS. OPEN EVERY DAY 9 A.M.-11 P.M. Many pleasing features combine to add to your pleasure. Regular admission at the International Entrance covers them all: Entertainment . . . Puppet and minstrel shows . . . Ross Fountains in their majestic "Ballet to the Stars" . . . romantic after-dark illumination . . . 6 gardens — fabulous Sunken Garden, English Rose, stately Italian, quaint Japanese, Lake and Stage Show Gardens . . . plus the Begonia Bower, Show Greenhouse, fascinating Seed and Gift Shop. Restaurant and coffee bar service available.

BUTCHART GARDENS. KNOWN THROUGHOUT THE WORLD FOR THEIR INCREDIBLE BEAUTY . . . EVER CHANGING, ALWAYS LOVELY! Skilful planning, constant replanting, dedicated gardeners pooling their ideas and knowledge, keep them that way week after week, season after season. Developed from an old abandoned limestone quarry over half a century ago, they have grown to become one of the world's most unusual, written about, talked about, admired attractions.

BUTCHART GARDENS ROMANTIC NIGHT LIGHTING. As darkness takes over, a thousand hidden lights combine with the moon and stars, the hills, trees and shrubs, lakes, lily ponds and fountains, to create a fairyland, softly scented by the flowers — a spectacle so unusual, so grand it's indescribable! Featuring the Sunken Garden and the spectacular Ross Fountains in their majestic "Ballet to the Stars." This alone is worth coming to see.

BUTCHART GARDENS FLORAL RESTAURANT. Open every day 11 a.m. to 7:30 p.m., serving delicious lunches, afternoon teas, and delightful buffet suppers in the evening. Continuous Snack and Coffee Bar service.

BUTCHART GARDENS SPARKLING ENTERTAINMENT. Adding a touch of hilarity in a musical way the "Butchart Gardeners" will entertain you Mon.-Fri. inclusive in the afternoon, and evenings, 1:30 - 3:30 p.m. and 6:00 - 8:00 p.m. On Saturday and Sunday afternoon 1:00 - 3:00 p.m. a group of zany but very talented musicians "The Butchart Buskers" with John Dunbar, will provide the fun. Plus colour films every evening of the week at dusk. "Helicopter Canada" or "Mountains of the Sea."

BUTCHART GARDENS SUGGESTS: Combine it all into one grand, thrifty outing — the Gardens by daylight . . . entertainment . . . romantic night lighting . . . featuring the Sunken Gardens . . . and the Ross Fountains in their majestic "Ballet to the Stars". Regular admission covers it all. For added pleasure, dine in the Floral Restaurant.

Coal Talks Set for City

West German industrialist Dr. K. G. Beck will be featured speaker at the 25th conference on coal in Victoria Sept. 16 to 19.

He will discuss how technical development of pig iron and blast furnace coke production has altered the requirements on coking coals.

Dennis Browne, commercial secretary in the Canadian high commission in Australia, will discuss that country's coal industry.

L. L. Atkinson of Canadian National Railways and J. H. Morrish of CP Rail will present a paper on the competitive position of western Canadian coal in eastern Canada.

Other papers will deal with risk and cash flow return of western coal properties, specifications of a coal contract, open pit mining and using metallurgical waste coals for power generation.

Dinner speaker will be Gordon M. MacNabb, senior assistant deputy minister of the department of energy, mines and resources.

Registration is on Sept. 16 and opening session on Sept. 17. Welcoming speeches will be made by provincial Mines Minister Leo Nimsick, Oakanga-Kootenay MP Douglas Stewart, and T. E. Tibbetts, chairman of the coal division of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy.

After the closing session on Sept. 19 there will be a tour of the coal bulk loading facilities at Roberts Bank.

Synthetic Gas Free From Rule

WASHINGTON (AP) — The budding business of producing synthetic gas from coal has received a boost from a decision of the Federal Power Commission.

The FPC ruled it has no authority to regulate the production or transportation of the synthetic product except when it is mixed with natural gas, or when sold in interstate commerce.

The synthetic product is being proposed as a supplement for natural gas, which is in tight supply in many areas.

Open your eyes to Hitachi's 20" solid state world of colour

T1
Hitachi's not just another 20" colour TV. It's the most sensational example of all that's new and exciting in the way of home entertainment. Colour so real you can almost feel it. With a solid state chassis that gives you instant sound the moment you switch your set on.

Hitachi doesn't stop here, they go on offering you still more eye-opening features like:
- 20" enlarged square cornered colour picture tube
- Automatic picture setting and automatic fine tuning controls with illuminated indicators
- Twin telescopic antennas
- 8 position pre-set UHF tuner memorizes your channel selection, making future tuning unnecessary
- Walnut woodgrain veneer cabinet
- One year parts and service guarantee

Go ahead and open your eyes to Hitachi colour and performance — nothing else is good enough for you.

Lloyds Quadraphonic sound is completely solid state

T2
Four speaker quadraphonic sound is rapidly replacing the old two speaker system. Why? Because it provides even better reception —you actually feel an entire symphony is playing right there in your living room. Single instruments can be distinguished easily and the whole effect is so impressive you'll wonder how you ever did without those four speakers.

And now with Lloyds using solid state in their AM/FM and FM stereo tuner/amplifier, the performance is intensified. Brought to a perfection true music-lovers will recognise.

Other Lloyds features include:
- Four individual extension speakers in walnut cabinets
- Automatic BSR record changers with dust cover
- Built-in 8 track player plays quadraphonic and stereo pre-recorded cartridges
- Optional mobile stand for 19.99

Water ...But With A Twist

By STUART AUERBACH
The Washington Post

Polywater. It sounded like science fiction when it was discovered 10 years ago. It had the same chemical formula as water — the familiar H20 — but it looked and behaved differently from the water we see around us.

It didn't freeze, but solidified into a glass-like substance at 40 degrees below zero.

It failed to boil at 400 degrees. It felt like droplets of baby oil, would creep up the walls of test tubes and disappear on laboratory floors.

Now, after 4½ years of intense research, the controversy over whether polywater exists or is merely a laboratory accident has been settled.

Polywater is simply water polluted by the microscopically thin quartz tubes in which it was made.

Most of the 400 scientists around the world who attempted to prove or disprove the polywater theory now agree with that conclusion.

It was made official last month when Russian physicist Dr. Boris Derjaguin admitted that contaminants caused the strange behavior of the polywater — which he called anomlaous water.

Scientists always were aware that contaminants might have caused the strange behavior of polywater. And they took all possible steps to make sure their samples were pure.

Although polywater is easy to make (by condensing water vapor in quartz tubes, then suspending the tubes over distilled water in a sealed vacuum for about 18 hours), scientists were never able to make a large amount of it.

In 4½ years of intensive research, less than two jiggersful of polywater was made.

The minute quantities that scientists had to work with made it extremely difficult to detect contaminants.

Nevertheless, scientists sought to run all possible tests for contaminants.

After tests failed to find any contaminants, Derjaguin tried a refined electron probe. These showed, according to chemical and engineering news, "that samples of anolmalous water, prepared under the most clean conditions, contain silicon atoms in amounts to indicate dissolution of quartz when water is condensing."

"The formation of anomalous water," Derjaguin said, "is probably attributable to an enhanced dissolving power of condensing vapors."

In an article in a recent issue of nature, the British Science Journal, Derjaguin and Dr. N. V. Churaev reported "that there are no condensates (of water) both free of impurity atoms and simultaneously exhibiting anomalous properties."

Still unanswered, however is what caused the unique spectrum — the linear fingerprints that every chemical compound shows when infrared lights are shined through it — that Dr. Ellis Lippincott and his associates at the university of Maryland discovered.

Lippincott insisted that his spectrum readings showed no traces of silicon, and his finding was a key buttress to the theory that polywater was a different form of H2O.

The Maryland scientists still don't believe that contaminants caused the strange properties of polywater.

Although they have no data to prove it, they believe that some important changes in the surface chemistry of water are involved.

On the basis of the spectroscope results from Lippincott and Dr. Robert Stromberg of the National Bureau of Standards, theoretical chemists began constructing the architectural arrangement of hydrogen and oxygen atoms in polywater.

They arrived at a new, simple combination of H2O molecules that allowed for the more than 20 unique properties of polywater.

Lippincott, three years ago, even hypothesized about the differences of the bonds that hold the hydrogen and oxygen together in polywater and ordinary water.

Dad's Role in a Birth —A Case for Activism

Never let it be said that I've an entirely closed mind, especially if it means the alienation of a whole bunch of readers. Which is what happened as the result of the true confession here last week that I'd rather be somewhere, anywhere, else than in the delivery room with a lady having a baby, especially if the lady happens to be my wife.

Well, sir, my office phone hardly stopped ringing for two days, almost all of the callers being young married women who believe that a husband's presence at a blessed event is a duty, an act of love and a genuine support.

True, most older women who've had a child without Old Dad's immediate attendance are in agreement with me — "I'd be in the nearest bar, myself, if it were the other way around," one confided — but clearly there's another side to be heard.

It's put rather well, I'd say, by Jonathan Franklin, our news editor, who, as I mentioned, was at the side of his wife, Halcen, when she produced a darlin' daughter last week.

"I remember when our first child was born two years ago," he says in a note to me. "In the next delivery room a woman was screaming with all the agony of the wrack. I looked in and she was writhing around on the delivery table, streaming sweat, face contorted and body knotted. She was causing herself so much physical and mental pain it was hard to believe. Needless to say, her husband was not there. In our delivery room there was silence except for the breathing routine we both had learned. No shrieks, just quiet talk between contractions.

"This was the burial of the myth, Jack" Jonathan goes on. "Even in this modern age a birth is natural. In so-called primitive countries it strikes no terror in either mother or father. And it takes no bravery for a man to be in the delivery room, just a bit of training so he'll know what to expect.

"Of course a man can't be part of a birth in the same way as his wife. After all, it's her body and she is experiencing some intense feelings which can at times be almost overwhelming. But the man is a familiar face, albeit masked and gowned, in strange surroundings. If it is a first birth it's a trip into the unknown. The woman may like a hand to hold. Would you send your three-year-old to kindergarten alone on his first day?

"Towards the end," Jonathan concludes, "the contractions are really hard work. No pain, Jack, but she will be sweating, thirsty. You can mop her face or give her a sip of water. You can hold up her head and shoulders to help her push, and finally see the baby's head born. If you feel that the woman is undergoing a dreadful ordeal that is even more of a reason to be with her to help her through. You don't get married or make love in separate rooms so why run out when the baby's due? It is, after all, a family affair."

This is the point made, too, by Arthur and Libby Colman in their book, "Pregnancy — The Psychological Experience" which has been recommended to me. The Colmans believe in the delivery room presence of the husband because "it seems appropriate that the pregnancy experience should end as it began, in an intimate, shared moment between a man and a woman creating a new life."

In their chapter on "The Expectant Father's Experience," the Colmans make the point that so many of my callers made and we will close the subject with their words:

"For almost all observers, childbirth is awe-inspiring. Obstetricians who have viewed thousands of births still thrill at the wonder of the beautifully formed creature slipping out of its warm, watery world into the light and air. For the husband watching his own baby emerging from between the legs of his own wife, the emotional impact is unbelievable. Everybody else in the room is busy, but the husband can give himself up totally to the moment. His superfluity is at last a great advantage. He must grasp this moment, gulp it all, for he will carry it with him for the rest of his life.

"It is rare for a man to return to a non-participatory role once he has experienced such direct involvement. At the very least, he has been given ways to cope constructively with the inevitable intense feelings associated with childbirth. For men used to an active mode of living, it is extremely gratifying to have an alternative to the impotent waiting imposed by the hospital system. The husband's role is still secondary to his wife's and the obstetricians' but when he helps with controlled breathing or rubs his wife's tight muscles between contractions, a man is avoiding isolation and inaction for his wife as well as for himself.

City Stifles Conversions

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

There'll be no moratorium in Victoria on converting apartments to condominiums, city council agreed Tuesday, but rather a "statement of intent" to guide the business community.

And that statement says, in effect: Nothing doing — at least until the present shortage of apartment accommodation is drastically improved.

The actual wording of the resolution, moved by Ald. Mike Young at the informal council-in-committee session and unanimously supported, reads: "In view of the shortage of rental accommodation and the low vacancy rate for such accommodation, Victoria city council will not be favorably disposed toward the conversion of rental multiple accommodation to condominiums."

Apart from enunciating that policy, which will be confirmed at next week's regular council meeting, aldermen also backed a suggestion by Mayor Peter Pollen that the planning and engineering departments be asked to draft special design and construction standards for proposed new condominium buildings.

But that proposal drew strong opposition from Ald. Sam Bawlf, who said it would create strong pressure on the already inadequate stock of apartment accommodation.

"If you create special standards which raise the cost to the developer he is obviously going to opt for converting," he said. To which Pollen replied the only real form of protection lay in a moratorium on such conversions.

Bawlf also argued that giving special consideration to people who buy condominiums amounts to an indirect type of discrimination against people in rental accommodation who are not protected by similar standards.

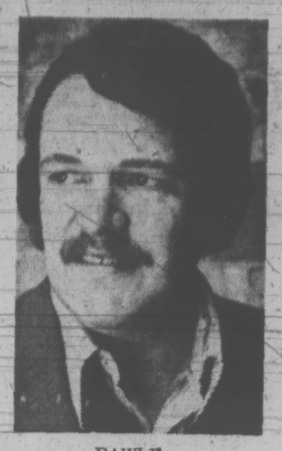

There should be an across-the-board establishment of standards as the "lowest common denominator" for all types of construction, he said.

But other council members and especially the mayor disagreed, pointing out that there are basic differences between the two types of accommodation.

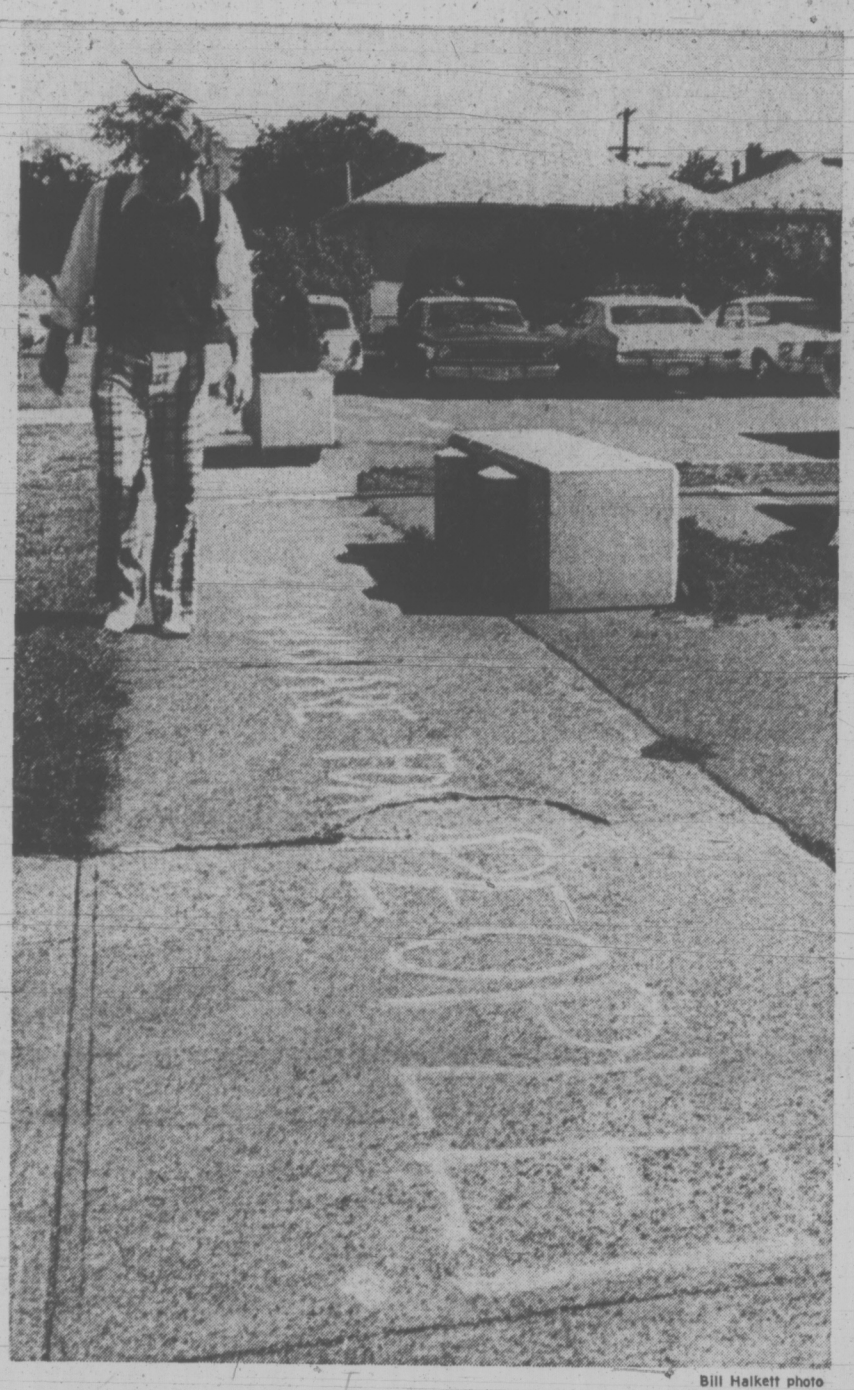

Describing them as "poles apart," Pollen said people buying condominium accommodation often face shocks in the shape of high tax bills, lack of proper sound insulation, nuisance from neighboring pets and children and the difficulty of reselling.

Such people cannot, like ordinary renters, "exercise their wholesome discretion" by moving out of that situation, he said.

"There isn't one condominium newspaper ad that says 'No children or pets allowed,' because they can't say it," he added.

UNSIGHTLY BLACKTOP on Victoria's parking lots should be screened by shrubbery, says the city bylaw, but one citizen apparently objects to the planters intruding on to the sidewalk. At a parking lot on Meares, between Cook and Vancouver, someone Tuesday pushed over the offending object and scrawled indignantly in chalk: "Sidewalks are for people."

SECOND SECTION

Pollen Sets Sails For Fall Race To City's Helm

Dispelling all doubt and speculation, Mayor Peter Pollen announced today he will seek voter support for a second two-year term in the Nov. 17 civic election.

"How could I not run again?" Pollen said at his weekly City Hall press conference.

And although he could think of "a million and one things I could do with my time," he could not envisage withdrawing from the city scene when so many major tasks affecting the future of James Bay, Victoria West, the waterfront and the downtown area remain half-completed.

The only qualification Pollen tossed in with his statement was the admission he would not run for mayor if the candidates included someone of the calibre of Ald. Mike Young (chairman of council's zoning committee).

But that didn't mean he was trying to "ordain" Young as his successor, he stressed. Young was one of three or four members of city council who would make an excellent mayor of the city or MLA, he added.

To date the only possible candidate for the Victoria mayoralty to emerge is Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, and he has merely said he is keeping his options open in that respect.

Pollen confessed he is "quite concerned" at this dearth of candidates, both for the mayoralty and aldermanic seats.

INFLATION BOOSTED AS RECREATION AID

A city alderman suggested Tuesday the time has come to think seriously about the benefits of one kind of inflation.

Ald. Sam Bawlf told city council's Group B committee Victoria should study the possibility of building inexpensive recreational facilities by means of inflatable structures.

This type of construction is widely favored in European countries, particularly Sweden, Bawlf said. It enables such facilities as sports arenas and swimming pools to be provided at a building cost of about $3 per square foot, compared with $20 for conventional structures.

To illustrate the cost benefits, Bawlf said a community facility in Delta, including a complete ice sheet, icing equipment, change rooms and seating for 800, is being built for only $150,000.

"I believe it's time we caught up with this technology," he said.

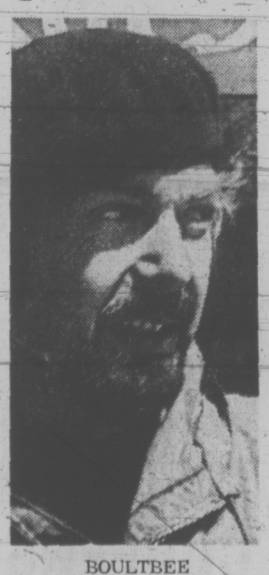

Curtis Roasts Arts Promoter

Arts promoter Jeremy Boultbee drew fire from Mayor Hugh Curtis Tuesday after he accused Saanich council's finance committee of stifling the arts.

Boultbee was appearing before council after the finance committee had rejected his application for a business licence to hold an arts fair and establish a refreshment concession at Mattick's Farm on Cordova Bay Road. Council eventually tabled the request.

Boultbee had also asked permission to hold open air concerts for "between 400 and 500 people" at the farm in order to help finance the arts fair.

He reminded Curtis that the mayor had said "arts must be encouraged" when he officiated at an art gallery opening July 17. He reminded aldermen they had refused to pay the municipality's share of $4,100 sought by Open Space on Fort Street through the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee.

BOULTBEE
... raises ire

Boultbee, stating that he expected his submission to be rejected, added he had "been very summarily dismissed" by the finance committee.

Curtis said:

"Let's put that behind us and zero in on what you have in mind. You came to council prepared to run into bureaucracy and squares . . . you brought it on yourself."

Curtis told Boultbee he had left the committee meeting "in a state of extreme annoyance."

Boultbee raised Ald. Leslie Passmore's ire when he said Passmore had reported he had visited Open Space and decided it "was not his cup of tea."

Passmore said this was incorrect:

"I said not all the exhibits at Open Space were my cup of tea," he told Boultbee. "The photography was pretty good. I'm a square. It appeared to me the paintings were a couple of people in the process of copulation! That's not my cup of tea."

Ald. William Noel said, "I think he (Boultbee) did have some reason to be annoyed. He made an application for a permit and was rejected with no reasons given."

Noel said the fire department had said the farm buildings did not meet the standards and washroom facilities were inadequate.

Ald. Alan Newberry said, "We're dealing only with an arts and crafts fair. I think it's indeed a welcome attraction—it's a good site for it."

Municipal solicitor Doug Patterson said the zoning laws did not allow open air concerts in the area.

"Victoria has more potential as an artists' colony than any other city in North America," Boultbee said. "To deliberately block these people when they exist in large numbers is definitely not forward-looking."

He said artists couldn't work in the "antiseptic silence" of such places as Nootka Court and Bastion Square, because "they get their hands dirty."

Union Centre Addition Delayed

Expansion of the Union Centre on Quadra has been postponed because construction bids were higher than anticipated, building co-op president Jim McAvoy said Tuesday.

The centre, owned by a co-operative of unions, was to have been extended over the Quadra Street parking lot to provide extra offices and $200,000 had been budgeted.

But bids ranged from $234,900 to $277,388 and McAvoy said the cost of financing would not have been covered by the anticipated revenue.

The idea of expanding has not been dropped but has been tabled until a better economic picture can be seen, McAvoy said.

Camosun Eyes Seven Sites

Seven possible sites for Camosun College's downtown campus will be viewed and considered by college administrators in the next few days, principal Dr. Grant Fisher said today.

The campus will be within a three-block radius of the entrance to Bastion Square and must be easily visible from a main pedestrian thoroughfare, Fisher said.

"We're still hoping for a Jan. 1 opening" for the new campus, he said.

Community services courses for the general public and possibly an assessment program for people re-entering the education system after many years' absence will be offered in the new campus.

The site will be 3,000 square feet, plus a possible extra 2,000 square feet which would be used for a classroom-laboratory for a dental assistant program, said Fisher.

Several possible sites will be selected this fall by Camosun College Council and submitted to the department of education for approval before a three-year lease is signed on one site, he said.

TRIO OF HIKERS BELIEVED SAFER

An experienced hiker said the fatal accident on the West Coast Trail Saturday may not have happened if the party had been composed of three persons instead of two.

Dennis Maxwell was referring to the drowning of Donald A. Matheson of London, Ont., who slipped off a rocky ledge into the sea.

"If the party had been composed of three persons equipped with rope, there would have been no problem," he said. "People should travel in threes if they plan to traverse hazardous areas. They should also be properly equipped to deal with an emergency."

Maxwell said, except for a few sandstone ledges, the trail is comparatively safe.

He said he hoped the accident would not lead to the elimination of all the challenging aspects of the trail.

"The trail near Port Renfrew is challenging and interesting," he said. "I would hate to see this aspect of the trail disappear."

Trail Priority May Change

The federal parks department will take another look at priorities on its West Coast Trail improvement program following the drowning Saturday of Donald Arthur Matheson, of London, Ont.

Reg Joscelyn, operation manager for Pacific Rim National Park at Long Beach, said Tuesday a survey of the accident scene will be made this week.

The Logan Creek section of the trail is about 15 miles from Port Renfrew and is reported in poor condition. The 23-year-old hiker slipped on rocks near Logan Creek and fell into the sea.

Outdoorsmen said the federal parks department should have started improving the trail in the Port Renfrew area instead of first repairing the Pachena section, about 15 miles from Bamfield.

Joscelyn said he was aware that the trail is in poor condition at Logan Creek.

"We started to work from the Pachena end because more people use this section of the trail," he explained. "Many hikers walk from Pachena to Tusiat Falls and then return."

He said so far park crews have constructed three bridges and hope to complete 14 others by November.

"Our program is geared to develop the trail systematically from one end to the other, starting first with the section most in use," he said.

"But in view of the accident we will take another look at the program."

He said the answer might be to clear temporarily the Logan section of the trail of debris and fallen trees. Later the park's crew would install permanent bridges and other trail facilities.

He said the matter will be discussed when park superintendent Jack Holroyd returns from holidays.

BILL WALKER ON VACATION

Gorge Loses Larry

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

Dave Keith, who for four years has handled the juvenile champion Victoria Boys' Club team, will coach Victoria Gorge Molsons in their first season in the new B.C. Soccer League.

The Welsh-born Keith, possessor of both English and Canadian coaching awards, takes over from Larry De Costa who, after 16 years' coaching at various levels with the Gorge organization, says he needs "a change."

Keith put his new charges through a practice run against Gorge's first division district league team at Hampton Park Tuesday night and then said he felt the club would be able to field a stronger team this season than they did last year in the Pacific Coast League.

★ ★ ★

Joining last year's Gorge regulars will be four youngsters who are the cream of Keith's Boys' Club squad which recently won seven of 12 games on a tough tour of Britain — John McGuire, a Canadian schoolboy international, Steve Forslund, Wayning Lee and goalkeeeper Jim DeGoede.

DeGoede takes over in goal from Graham Lee, who leaves for Australia on Saturday, Sept. 15, the day Molsons open their first-division campaign in the B.C. League with a match against Hungarian Turul at Vancouver's Empire Stadium.

Keith, who is also provincial coach for Vancouver Island, strongly supported the move by Gorge and London Boxing Club (formerly Victoria West-United) to join the new Vancouver-based league.

"It's the only way there is for Island soccer," Keith said in an interview Tuesday night. "People on the island have to have representation in the top league of soccer if they are going to progress."

"I know there is a great deal of expense involved," Keith admitted. "But it is obviously worthwhile and I believe the people who back this sort of thing are doing a splendid thing both for soccer and for the kids of the Island."

★ ★ ★

Keith, a teacher at Central Junior High School, said that, after dealing with schoolboys all his life, he realized a different approach would be necessary in coaching men.

But he said he hopes to introduce tighter discipline — "not in terms of 'yes sir, no sir,' but in terms of play and in the game itself — in handling the Gorge squad.

Alan "Fuzzy" Blair, citing work commitments, has joined De Costa and quit his post. A new trainer has yet to be named.

★ ★ ★

De Costa said Tuesday night he was stepping down "with reluctance" but was doing so because he wanted more time at home and because he felt both he and the players needed a change from his administration.

"I started with the small boys and sort of worked up with them," De Costa explained. "I've been coaching some of the boys, like Lee for example, continuously since they were 10. Now they need someone new."

So now it's back to Square 1 on the snakes and ladders board of coaching for De Costa, who says he'll start again with the boys.

"Anyway, with the kids it's just one night a week coaching and a game Saturday morning," the coach said with a grin. "And that's all I need right now."

Second Opinion Suits Cardinals

By The Canadian Press

"He's out," said Bill Virdon of Pittsburgh Pirates. "He's safe," said Red Schoendienst of St. Louis Cardinals.

"He's out," said umpire Eddie Vargo. "He's safe," said umpire Bruce Froemming.

Not only were the managers unable to agree but it also took two umpires to figure out what happened in a key play of the Cardinals' 4-2 victory Tuesday night.

Losing 2-0 going into the eighth inning, the Cardinals scored three times, and the tiebreaking run was the one that started all the confusion in the National League baseball game.

Lou Brock was on third base when Pirate reliever Dave Giusti threw a wild pitch. Brock came home as catcher Manny Sanguillen recovered quickly and threw to Giusti, who was covering the plate.

CARDS PROTEST

Home plate umpire Vargo signaled "out," but the Cardinals stormed off their bench to protest. Schoendienst insisted that Vargo consult with second base umpire Froemming and he eventually called the runner safe.

"When Vargo asked me if the ball was loose, I said it was," Froemming said, explaining the decision.

"Giusti had the ball . . . but dropped it," said a satisfied Schoendienst, whose Cardinals boosted their lead over Pittsburgh Pirates to two games in the tight National League east race.

In other National League games, San Francisco Giants trimmed Los Angeles Dodgers 3-1; Atlanta Braves turned back San Diego Padres 3-0; Cincinnati Reds beat Houston Astros 12-7 in 10 innings; New York Mets defeated Philadelphia Phillies 7-1 and Montreal Expos nipped Chicago Cubs 3-2 to mark up their fourth straight victory.

Bryant, the National League's top winner with 21 decisions, had a no-hitter going until Joe Ferguson singled up the middle with one out in the seventh.

Pinch-hitter Phil Gagliano drove in the winning run with a squeeze bunt single in the 10th inning and streaking Cincinnati got five runs with two out to beat Houston. It was the sixth straight victory for the Reds, who took a one-game lead over Los Angeles in the National League West.

In the American League, Chicago White Sox made it sound like a half-time score in football as they humiliated Texas Rangers 14-0.

Elsewhere in the American, Boston Red Sox nipped Baltimore Orioles 2-1 in a dramatic 12 innings, Detroit Tigers edged New York Yankees 2-1, Cleveland Indians beat Milwaukee Braves 5-4, Minnesota shut out Kansas City Royals 6-0, and Oakland A's trimmed California Angels 4-3.

Chicago picked up its sixth straight victory against the Rangers and its 10th in the last 11 games.

Hustler Not Forgotten

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Margaret Court, the first player to make it into the semifinals of the U.S. Open tennis championships, is eager to erase two black marks on her record—Bobby Riggs and Chris Evert.

"If I win here, I'd have another go at him" said Mrs. Court of Riggs, the 55-year-old hustler who humiliated her in an exhibition match on Mother's Day.

Mrs. Court, who downed Virginia Wade of England 7-6, 7-6 in a quarter-final Tuesday, will face the winner of the match between Rosemary Cassals and Miss Evert.

It was Miss Evert, the teenager from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., who dashed the 31-year-old Australian's chances of winning her second tennis grand slam.

Mrs. Court, who had won the Australian and French Opens, didn't get to the final at Wimbledon. Miss Evert beat her 6-1, 1-6, 6-1 in a semi-final.

In the only other match between seeded players Tuesday, Stan Smith, No. 1 seed, rallied for a 3-6, 7-5, 6-3, 6-4 triumph over Tom Gorman, the No. 13 seed from Seattle.

Smith ran into resistance from Gorman, his former Davis Cup teammate who had the world's No. 1 player at match point in Barcelona earlier this year and defaulted because of an aching back.

He broke again early in the second set in a war of thunderclap services and was serving for the set at 5-4.

At this stage Smith displayed championship form. He broke Gorman at love with two bristling net-court shots and two perfect topspin lobs to make it 5-5.

He then won his own service with four aces that Gorman couldn't play and broke Gorman again in the 12th game for the set.

The match lasted two hours and 37 minutes.

Jan Kodes, the No. 6 seed from Czechoslovakia, defeated John Alexander of Australia 7-6, 7-5, 6-4; Nikki Pilic, the No. 15 seed from Yugoslavia, downed Bjorn Borg's, the teen-age star from Sweden, 6-4, 5-7, 6-3, 6-4; and Onny Parun of New Zealand beat Ross Case of Australia 6-4, 6-1, 4-6, 6-4.

An Eagle Eye On Weather

OTTAWA (CP) — The weather was a major concern for coach Eagles Keys as he prepared his British Columbia Lions to meet Ottawa Rough Riders tonight in their second Canadian Football League inter-locking game in three days.

Shortly before the Lions were mauled Monday in Hamilton by the Tiger-Cats 44-24—field level temperatures in Hamilton's Ivor Wynne Stadium were 124 degrees, and some players complained of difficulty breathing during the pre-game warmup.

At a Tuesday night news conference, Keys said he hoped "for a breath of fresh air" tonight at Lansdowne Park, the game is scheduled for 5 p.m. PDT and for national coverage on the CTV television network. The high temperature forecast for today is 90 degrees, and high humidity.

However, the grass playing surface here does not retain the heat as does the artificial turf elsewhere.

The heat was a decisive factor Monday, but the state of quarterback Don Moorhead's shoulder may be even more important tonight.

The B.C. pivot took a sharp rap on the right shoulder before half time Monday, and another in the same place a few minutes later.

X-rays Tuesday failed to disclose any problem, but Moorhead was unable to practise with the team and could not throw the ball.

Ace for Ian, Title to Jim

The 14-year-old Gamble won closest-to-the-pin honors by sticking the ball into the cup on the par-three seventh.

The hole-in-one, however, didn't help Ian's quest for the junior title. That went to Jim Nelson, who carded 86-16-70.

Polo Tourists Balance Record

A Canadian team captained by Tony Yonge of Victoria balanced its record with an easy 9-3 victory over a Sussex County side at Cowdray Park in England at the weekend.

The Canadians, who had beaten Scotland 5-1 last week, now have won two matches and lost two in their tour of Great Britain.

'LEND-LEASE' COACH TO CONDUCT CLINICS

Japanese coach Shinju Tochibori will conduct three volleyball coaching clinics in Victoria at S. J. Willis Junior High School on Thursday.

The Japanese have brought a lot of innovations to volleyball and are largely responsible for making the sport one demanding speed, power and stamina.

Tochibori is one of three coaches on loan to the B.C. Volleyball Association by the Japan Volleyball Association for a month. He is a lecturer at Tokyo University.

Four Tied for First After Tennis Trials

TORONTO (CP) — An eight-man round-robin competition to help determine members of Canada's Davis Cup tennis team wound up with a four-way tie for first place.

Officials of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association will select the team next weekend.

Tony Bardsley of Vancouver defeated Rejean Genois of Loretteville, Que., 3-6, 7-6, 6-0 to set up the tie.

Genois, Don McCormick of Victoria, Pierre Lamarche of Montreal and Chris Burr of Toronto all finished with 5-2 won-lost records.

Bardsley was 3-1, Dave Brown of Toronto 3-1, Louis Desmarteaux of London 2-5 and Guy Tetherleigh of Vancouver 0-7.

Martin Still Spouting Tales

DETROIT (AP) — Billy Martin says he lied about the incident that led to his dismissal as manager of Degroit Tigers of the American League.

Martin says he never told pitchers Joe Coleman and Fred Scherman to throw spitballs in a baseball game last week against Cleveland Indians.

Coleman and catcher Duke Sims, meanwhile, also say Martin didn't order spitters thrown.

"They had gotton together with Duke Sims in the dugout and decided to prove to the umpires that they (umpires) didn't know what a spitter was," Martin told one reporter. "The first I knew of it was when I saw Coleman wetting his fingers on the mound.

"Once that happened I had to stand behind my players," he continued. "I knew they'd be fined or suspended for what they had done and I couldn't let that happen. I needed them to pitch."

Martin told reporters after last Thursday's 3-0 loss to the Indians alleged spitball specialist Gaylord Perry that he had ordered the illegal pitches to bring the controversy "to a head."

"I'm admitting it," he said then.

Friday, Martin was suspended by American League President Joe Cronin, who said the action was taken "for directing your pitchers to throw illegal pitches and publicly stating that you have done so."

Sunday, Martin was fired by Jim Campbell, Tiger general manager, who said the spitball incident was the final straw in a long line of incidents leading to the sacking.

Also fired were Art Fowler and Charlie Silvera, two close friends of Martin, who were the pitching coach and bullpen coach of the club.

The two were brought by Martin to Detroit from the Minnesota Twins in 1971. They coached under Martin when the Twins won the 1969 West Division championship of the American League.

Angling Fleet Misses Tuna

CAPE ST. MARY, N.S. (CP) — Bluefin tuna outwitted anglers from nine nations Tuesday in the opening round of the international Tuna Cup match off southwestern Nova Scotia.

Brightly-colored boats, hidden in thick fog off the coast for much of the day, slipped back into port Tuesday evening with the empty-handed fishermen.

They had spent eight hours trolling the waters off the mouth of St. Mary's Bay.

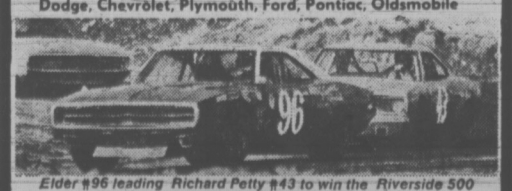

Only one tuna was spotted by the teams and no strikes were reported.

Insufficient Judgment Prompts Cougar Attacks

Percy and Penny Dewar, the couple doing a study on cougars in Northwest Bay which was covered in this space last week, had a few barbed comments to make on a variety of subjects when we visited them recently.

And most of the criticism was aimed at outdoorsmen whose thoughtless actions lead to cougar attacks.

"There's so little judgment used by people," said Percy.

Solitary dogs can be a tasty tidbit for these large cats.

"People should realize there are cougars in there," added Penny.

After all, one make a choice to go into an area that may be inhabited by cougars.

"They know the wildlife is there. They wouldn't go out and play in the middle of the blacktop when cars are going by," said Percy.

The Dewars, who have been assisted for the past few months by Penny's sister, Susan Brown, are at present operating the study on their own funds.

Grants from the National Research Council and the Canadian National Sportsmen's Show ran out earlier this year. Save for the collars supplied by the fish and wildlife branch, little help has been forthcoming from the government.

"We're mainly supporting ourselves. Most people just don't believe this — they think the fish and wildlife branch has been supporting us," said Percy.

★ ★ ★

Ian Smith, Vancouver Island's regional wildlife biologist, told us that the branch was "attempting to get some increased assistance through the budget."

"There's no way they can manage game — deer, elk or whatever — without first knowing what the predators do," Percy pointed out.

We hope our preent provincial government, which appears to be enlightened in this area at least, approves of the funding.

It is ironic the Dewars received initial aid for this project from the United States through Mrs. Ariel Appleton, president of an ecological preserve called The Research Ranch of Arizona, but little has subsequently been done by our own government.

Another change the Dewars would like to see involves the game regulations.

"You can sell the hide (cougar) now for $50," said Percy. "It should be made illegal to sell any part of a game animal."

And Percy has an answer for those professional cougar hunters who insist that a cougar must be killed now and then to keep up the interest of their hounds.

He hasn't killed a cougar for three years but the Dewar hounds are still going strong. They've treed 39 cougars in about a year and a half.

"We'd also like to see farmers compensated if any predators kill livestock," said Penny.

★ ★ ★

The Dewars felt if farmers are paid for stock killed by dogs, which should be controlled by people, there is even more reason for compensation for kills by wildlife.

It would probably be cheaper in the long run than the present setup of government predator control officers.

Since it's easier to hunt cougars with snow on the ground to reveal their tracks, the Dewars would like a closed season during the winter.

"At one time, when the bounty was on, the cougar population to my mind stayed the same. But now, with the numerous roads and a winter season on, it's possible to clean them out," said Percy.

One interesting facet to their study, which we didn't have space for last week, involves scratch marks.

Only males make these marks, which may be six to 16 inches long and up to three incres deep in the right material.

"We don't know what they're for yet," Percy admitted.

But they found one last winter which shed some light on how they're made. Before, it was assumed the marks were made with either the forepaws or with alternate swips of the hind feet — like a dog.

The one they found, however, clearly showed the cougar balances himself on his front legs while raking backwards with both hind feet at the same time.

"We've followed females that have followed males by the scratches," said Penny. "So it seems like it's some sort of indication of their presence."

But they have observed males going over into areas where other males are located — so it apperently isn't a warning.

Males start to scratch when they're about a year old and will renew the sign if they come back to the same spot in two or three weeks.

Aussie Internationals Visiting

Perth Hotspurs play a Victoria Select side at 6 tonight at the University of Victoria in a men's exhibition game — and there are no fewer than 11 full Australian internationals in the visiting squad.

Included in the touring team are the captain Brian Glencross, a well-known international, and Kevin Carton, former captain of Australia's Olympic team.

Five players — Colin Greig, Al Shaw, Brian Foley, Jim Wellham and Garth Montgomery — from the strong Rebels Grey Club have been named to the Victoria Selects.

As well, Craig Wilson and Laurie Bullivant have been chosen from Rebels Reds and the others on the Victoria team are Mike Hayes (Fossils), Bob Raine (Orangemen), Russ McDowell (UVic) and Amarjit Hundal (Tigers).

Reserves are Derek Douglas (Rebles Grey), Dan Tourangeau (Rebels Red), Jagit Dhanowa (Tigers) and Guy St. Pierre and Barry Lorten (Orangemen).

Two regular reps, goalkeeper Jim Sherlock of Rebels Grey and experienced Dave Auld of Castawayas, were unavailable for training and for selection.

Hotspurs are on a tour that has taken them to Fiji, Hawaii, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver. After playing in Victoria, they visit Tokyo and Hong Kong on their way home.

Sox Lose Petrocelli

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Red Sox have reported that third-baseman Rico Petrocelli will undergo surgery for removal of a calcium growth in his right elbow. Petrocelli, who was placed on the disabled list last week, is expected to be lost for the remainder of the reason.

Eight Victorians Eye Games Team

At least eight Victoria athletes have qualified to compete this Saturday and Sunday in the Canadian closed track and field championships at Swangard Stadium in Burnaby.

Murray Keating, John Wheeler, Brian Hawksworth, Reg Effa, Lorna McHattie and Jill Pelland all of the Victoria Track Club and Bev Cox, a Victoria runner with Vancouver Olympic Club, and Cheryl Blevins of Victoria Mercuries Track Club have all bettered national qualifying standards.

Keating is national hammer throwing champion, Wheeler will run in the 5,000 metres, Hawksworth is in the 400-metre hurdles, Miss McHattie will compete in both the shot put and discus and Miss Pelland will run in the 100-metre hurdles.

Miss Cox will run in the 400 metres and Miss Blevins is expected to contest both the 200 and 400 metres.

The national championships are being staged later than usual this year to combine trials to select the Canadian track team for the Commonwealth Games in Christchurch, New Zealand, in January.

Silver Medal For Canada

BELGRADE (CP) — Four world records set and a silver medal for Canada in sychronized swimming . . . the story after Tuesday's competition in the world aquatic championships.

Canada got silver medal No. 3 after four days of the championships when eight Calgary teen-agers finished second to the United States in the sychronized team final.

" . . . We accomplished our goal—we wanted to be close to the U.S.," said coach Mary-Ann Reeves of Calgary. "No one else has been close to them in sychronized swimming. We felt that we pushed them."

Michelle Clakins, 15, Frances Hambrook, 16, Debbie Humphrey, Lorraine Nicholl and Gail Page, all 19, and Carol Stuart, Susan Thomas and Laura Wilkin, all 17, were members of the Calgary team.

Teresa Anderson of the U.S. beat Jojo Carrier of Quebec City in solo competition while Miss Anderson and Carol Johnson topped Miss Carrier and Mado Ramsay Noppen, also of Quebec City, in duets.

Canada had a poor day in swimming as East Germany picked up three gold medals and the U.S. two.

The East Germans set two world records in the women's 4-by-100-metre medley relay. Because records are allowed on the first leg of of a relay team, Ulrike Richter picked up a world mark with a time of one minute, 4.9 seconds in the backstroke portion. She broke the record of 1:05.6 set in 1969 by Karen Muir of South Africa.

She also teamed with Renate Vogel, Rosemarie Kother and 14-year-old Kornelia Ender for a world record of 4:16.8 in the relay, beating the former standard of 4:20.75 established by the U.S. last year.

Canada's team of Wendy Cook of Vancouver, Marion Stuart of Pointe Claire, Que., Patti Stenhouse of Surrey, B.C., and Gail Amundrud of Ottawa, wound up fifth in 4:29.6.

What makes a Mercedes-Benz a Mercedes-Benz?

Look over just 10 of the features of this Mercedes-Benz 280 now. You may detect a considerable difference between this and other cars you can buy.

1. Four giant power disc brakes haul the 280 from 80 mph to stop in only 285 feet*.
2. You see an astonishing 87% of your surroundings: roof pillars are immensely strong, remarkably slim.
3. Leech-like radial tires on 6-inch rims, teamed with all-round independent suspension and our swing axle allow you to handle alarming corners, rutted roads with aplomb.
4. Shaped by wind-tunnel design, the 280 stays calm in foul weather. Tests show an 80 mph gust scarcely ruffles a 60 mph sedan one inch off track.
5. The roof supports 10 tons. The entire passenger compartment is a patented safety cell.
6. Anatomic seats and wide arm rests brace you, help prevent fatigue. Tiring vibrations are eliminated from the seat by tuned springs. Steering wheel has its own shock-absorber.
7. Our own power-steering system is used. It is light at low speed; precise, firm at high speed. "The best"*.
8. Separate air-vents for front seat travellers. Each gets the climate he prefers.
9. Top speed 110 mph. Powerful crossflow-head engine has transistor ignition for smooth elastic response.
10. Body welded to help prevent squeaks. Lavish sound-proofing. 40 lbs. of paint and wax protection. Underbody sealed by vinyl plastic coating.

Big Daddy Blasts New Barrier

NEW YORK (AP) — Man can now drive a motor-powered vehicle a quarter of a mile in less than six seconds.

And Don (Big Daddy) Garlits, who was the first to do it, says: "We'll soon be breaking the speed barrier that couldn't be broken."

It was an American Hot Rod Association (AHRA) record, but Garlits admits it will stand "about as long as it takes me and a few others to crank a little more power into engines and a tad more gumption into our spinal systems."

Garlits, one of the game's great innovators, wheels a rearengined dragster, commonly called a "rail" because its distinguishing parts include two small bicycle wheels at the front and a pair of tractor-sized rear wheels that are separated by two long rails that make up the chassis.

Jenkins, who made more than $250,000 last year, recently screeched to an 8.98-second clocking for the quarter-mile, a historic first in the National Hot Rod Association's (NHRA) record book. That's a top end speed of 153.05 m.p.h.

Garlits and Jenkins, both of whom are approaching the magic $1-million mark in career winnings, believe their marks stand some chance of being eclipsed in two big drag meets in the next two weeks.

Garlits, who brought the rearengine concept to drag racing in 1971, was the first dragster to run the quarter-mile in seven seconds, the first to go under 6.30 seconds, the first under 6.10 and the first to get under six seconds.

The Tampa, Fla., native said it took him 12 years to drop from his then-world record 7.68 clocking in 1961 to mark.

his present sub-six-second

"A lot of people didn't think we'd ever travel faster than 170 m.p.h. in a quarter of a mile. Fortunately, we were too busy racing to read such predictions at the time, so we just went out and ran 176.4 in 1957," he said.

Then it was 180, 200, and 240 m.p.h. that progressively became the ceiling on top and speeds. Garlits broke them all, and now holds the NHRA and AHRA top speed records of 243.24 and 241.28 m.p.h., respectively.

Before there are any sudden drops in the elapsed time required to cover a 440-yard straightaway, Garlits thinks there will be a period of stabilization.

"I know my Dodge engine has more power now than I can put to use," he said in a telephone interview. "It is a matter of getting all the other factors balanced consistently so we can break six seconds regularly.

"That depends on a thousand little things, literally, including starting lights, clocks, drag strip conditions, weather and atmosphere, as well as all of the parts on the machine.

"That, of course, is what makes drag racing. They say baseball is a game of inches. Our sport is a game of thousandths of an inch, or hundredths of a second.

"But in addition to the mechanical aspects, it still depends a lot on the driver who is sitting behind the wheel. The machine isn't going to reach 250 m.p.h. by itself."

CROWD, BETTING MARKS TUMBLE

VANCOUVER (CP) — An attendance record that had stood since 1966 and three betting records were broken Monday as a crowd of 26,434 packed Exhibition Park for a 10-race thoroughbred card.

Labor Day was also the final day of the annual Pacific National Exhibition, and fairgoers were admitted free to the race track. Previous attendance record, 24,962, was set on Labor Day in 1966.

The total mutuel handle Monday was $846,965, easily-topping the mark of $795,502 set July 1 this year.

The single-race betting record of $94,125 set July 1 was upped to $95,589 Monday. And a record of $115,804 for betting on a single race with quinella, set in 1972, was increased to $117,303.

Canada Rallies To Even Record

BOLOGNA (CP) — Canada evened its record in the international baseball tournament at 2-2 Tuesday by defeating Puerto Rico 5-3, chiefly on the fine relief pitching and heavy hitting of right hander Phil Lepage of Fredericton.

Lepage took over from Les Orhn of Edmonton after 1 2-3 innings, with Puerto Rico leading 3-0, and shut out the opposition the rest of the way. He gave up only two hits, walked one batter and struck out six. He also hit two doubles and a single and drove in one run. Rod Taylor, an outfielder from Lethbridge, also had two singles for Canada.

The Canadians outhit the opposition 11-6 and have collected 33 hits in their last three games.

The Canadian team meets Argentina today.

In other tournament games Tuesday, the United States beat Taiwan 5-2 and remained tied for the championship lead with Japan, which crushed Italy 11-5. The U.S. and Japan have 4-0 records.

Expansion Under Study For Mayfair Centre

Mayfair is conducting a study on the feasibility and cost of expanding the shopping centre but no firm decision will be taken until 1974, manager Rene Savoie said Tuesday.

A preliminary engineering report shows that expansion would be feasible but the study on costs is still under way, he said.

Construction plans could not begin until that study is complete, he said.

"The cost study could well take until the end of the year with the decision to go ahead or not be made in 1974," he said.

He said the expansion might include more space for Woodward's department store but there were no firm plans at this time.

Pollen Unhappy With Inflated Offer

In negotiations with the city of Victoria stretching over one year, B.C. Telephone Company has more than tripled its original offer for a small segment of Smith's Hill park.

Although he joined Tuesday with members of the city zoning committee in recommending sale of the property for $100,000, Mayor Peter Pollen said the proposed transaction gives little or no cause for satisfaction.

He acknowledged the figure was much higher than the $20,000 originally offered by B.C. Tel, but said it is "really a recognition of our limited capacity as a city to lease land."

"We are being forced to sell rather to lease," he added.

Pollen said the city had wanted to lease the site at Smith's Hill for B.C. Tel to construct a microwave transmission tower, but found that a long-term lease was expressly prohibited by the B.C. Municipal Act.

The reasoning behind this restriction, he said, was the elimination of "patronage" abuses whereby influential persons had been able to obtain long-term leases on valuable real estate at prices well below market trends.

But the mayor said a municipality should have the "legal competence" to enter into a protracted lease, even if such an action required cabinet approval.

The committee endorsed his suggestion that he would write on council's behalf, asking Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer to consider introducing the appropriate amendments to the act.

Under the sale agreement recommended for council approval, there i sa stipulation that the Smith's Hill property will revert to the city at no cost if at some future time the company no longer requires it for telecommunications purposes.

The company has also agreed to certain restrictive covenants, including one stating the tower will not be used for direct reception of television signals from commercial stations as part of any extension to the cablevision network.

Parents Released

BARSTOW, Calif. (AP) — Lawrence and Alice Parker, charged with manslaughter after their 11-year-old diabetic son died when his insulin was thrown away, were released from jail on their own recognizance Tuesday. The Parkers, arrested Aug. 29, returned to their home in Barstow. Parker, 34, and his wife, 29, were charged after their son Wesley, 11, died two weeks ago of diabetes. They said they felt he had been cured by a faith healer.

MPs Probe Police Visit

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons voted Tuesday to investigate the actions of RCMP and Ottawa city police who visited Conservative MP Flora MacDonald's office without permission and questioned her staff about missing Indian affairs files.

All four parties in the Commons agreed to Miss MacDonald's motion asking the House privileges committee to look into the police actions on the grounds they abused Miss MacDonald's privileges as a member of Parliament. She represents Kingston and the Islands and is the Conservatives' Indian affairs spokesman.

Under House rules, police cannot enter MPs' offices or question their staffs without the permission of the members or the Speaker of the House.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux, who earlier ruled there appeared to be a breach of Miss MacDonald's parliamentary privileges, said he knew all MPs would be concerned with the police actions.

Miss MacDonald said the police questioning of her staff and herself implied she was a party to a criminal act — removing confidential files from the Indian affairs department.

The files, all concerned with the James Bay power project in Quebec, were apparently taken during an occupation of Indian affairs headquarters by about 200 young Indians last Thursday.

Miss MacDonald has often been critical of the power project.

A few hours after the files were reported missing, the police visited Miss MacDonald's offices. They returned later at Miss MacDonald's invitation.

The freshman MP said in an interview that at no time did the police tell her the reason for their questioning. She said she learned about the missing files later from Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien.

BURGLAR HAMMERED

CONCORD, Calif. (UPI) — Steven Wagner got a jail cell and a knot on the head because of the way he wielded a sledgehammer.

Police said Tuesday that they found Wagner unconscious behind a drug store and in his hands was a broken sledge hammer. They also found holes in the store's wall.

Wagner was trying to break into the store when the sledge handle broke and the hammer end struck him on the head, police said.

Indian Judge Finds Dream Of Boyhood

COURTENAY (CP) — Provincial court Judge Alfred Scow hopes to help alleviate some problems between the Indian communities and the police on Vancouver Island by working in the northern part of the island.

Judge Scow, recently transferred to this area from the Prince Rupert district in British Columbia, is the only full-time, legally-trained Indian judge in the province. He was the first Indian called to the B.C. bar in 1962.

Moving to the northern protion of the island may help Judge Scow achieve a boyhood dream. During his childhood in Alert Bay, which now is under his jurisdiction, Judge Scow decided he wanted to become a lawyer to help his people.

"I could see from things that were happening that we were not dealing with the government as equals. They had a battery of lawyers and we had none. I felt we should have a lawyer so I decided to become one."

Judge Scow found that most of his clients were non-Indian when he practised law in Vancouver. He said he offered his services to Indian organizations but they did not respond.

Appointed a judge in 1971, he said he believes the transfer to Courtenay is an attempt to resolve problems between Indians and police. Another of his duties will be to develop a family court so that children receive adequate maintenance from their parents.

Judge Scow is a graduate of University of British Columbia. He practised law in Vancouver for three years before becoming city prosecutor in New Westminster, B.C. for two years.

Shortly after, he was appointed by the provincial government as chairman of the board of review for the Workmen's Compensation Board.

In 1971, when he had just reached an agreement with the National Indian Brotherhood to work for them in Ottawa, he was appointed judge in the Prince Rupert district.

WELLBURNS

The orange Orient.
How sweet it is.

Imagine yourself in the ornately painted halls of Nijo Castle where the shoguns held sway over feudal lords.

Or sailing in a Chinese fishing junk. Or bargaining for ivory carvings in Hong Kong.

Imagine, too, the Temple of the Emerald Buddha and the floating markets of Bangkok.

Or visiting the Tiger Balm Gardens in Hong Kong. And the tea houses on Tokyo's fascinating Ginza.

Come with us aboard our big, beautiful orange jet and you'll discover incredible places like Tokyo, Kyoto, Osaka, and Hong Kong, with guides who know what a Canadian wants to be shown, and what you'll enjoy discovering for yourself.

We'll also book you in hotels that offer accommodations you are accustomed to. And all the while, you'll know that we're as near as the phone.

On top of all this, CP Air offers you an easy time-payment plan.

Plus the fastest, most convenient service to the Orient from anywhere in Canada.

(In fact, we're the only Canadian flag carrier offering service across Canada and on to the Orient. Which, incidentally, is a nice way of finding out if our Executive Jet service in Canada really deserves its fame.)

And our flight from Vancouver to Tokyo is non-stop. Which is the same sort of thing that could be said of our in-flight service.

All of which is served to you by our well-trained, multi-lingual cabin attendants, who are some of the most friendly and skillful people in the sky.

Call CP Air or your travel agent. Just say that you're ready for a taste of Oriental delights.

And that you want it sweetened with an orange.

Congress Back to Cloudy Session

WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — The U.S. congress returned from its long August Holiday today to face a period of uncertain relationships with the White House and President Nixon.

It is likely that there will be further confrontations in the weeks ahead over such issues as minimum wages, health services and presidential war powers.

But it is likely that there will be some White House efforts to improve the dialogue between the legislative and executive branches.

One presidential assistant reported last weekend that Nixon intends to "help energize" the lawmakers and "point the way" towards the solution of outstanding problems.

A congressional speech by the President is not contemplated, this assistant said, but various White House initiatives are being considered.

Another presidential aide said a message to Congress is probable in which Nixon will outline the 25 or 30 pieces of legislation he would like to have enacted. Other probable initiatives include a cabinet meeting, a meeting with congressional leaders and — perhaps within a week — another presidential news conference.

Thus far in 1973, relations between the White House and congress have been rocky.

On the other hand, all four presidential vetoes of 1973 have been sustained. More vetoes are expected.

In these struggles the odds are with the president's hill allies.

He needs only 146 votes to sustain a veto and there are 192 Republicans in the House, as well as many sympathetic Democrats.

How much support he will be able to muster in the battles to come will depend in part on what Congressmen learned about the president's popularity and about the public mood during the August recess.

While Congress doesn't deserve any medals for what it has accomplished so far, neither does it deserve Nixon's brickbat that it's been so tied up with Watergate it's neglecting its regular business.

Despite the President's claim during his Aug. 15 Watergate speech that "legislation vital to your health and well-being sits unattended on the congressional calendar" because Congress is preoccupied with Watergate, Congress's average is about par with other first-year sessions.

That is, most of what Congress has to do remains to be done.

But a Congressional quarterly survey comparing the sheer volume of work — committee reports, roll call votes, hours in session and a number of important bills enacted or approved by either or both houses shows the 93rd Congress at this point far ahead of some other Congresses and equal to most.

The first confrontation with the president will come during the early part of this month on two bills — the minimum wage bill and an emergency medical services act.

The Senate on Aug. 2 voted to override the President's veto, but in the House a vote on the veto was delayed until Sept. 12 so House supporters of the bill could garner votes.

The bill authorizes $185 million through fiscal 1976 for emergency medical care and keeps open eight health service hospitals the president wants closed.

Worker Defiance Continues

YORKTON (CP) — Saying he was concerned about the possibility of violence, Labor Minister Gordon Snyder has sent his assisstant deputy minister to meet both sides in a dispute at the Morris Rod Weeder Co. farm machinery manufacturing plant.

Snyder, in a telephone interview from Regina, said Bob Sass was to meet management officials and representatives of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union, local 595, to discuss the problem.

At the same time the company prepared to seek an injunction to order a group of employees out of the plant where they had set up barricades.

The men occupied the plant Monday night in protest over what they called the unjust demotion of a shift foreman in the welding shop. The plant, where about 350 persons work, makes weed control and land cultivating machinery.

There have been no serious incidents of violence during the occupation, although steel slugs were thrown on some occasions at persons approaching the building.

Several RCMP constables are patrolling the area. A spokesman for the force said they were not called in by either the management or the employees.

CALGARY (CP) — Harvesting operations moved steadily towards conclusion in southern Alberta and progress is about the same as last year in the north, the Alberta Wheat Pool reports.

About 16 per cent of the province's barley was in the bin and 15 per cent of the rapeseed. Twenty-one per cent of the wheat was reported threshed.

Rains delayed harvesting in all regions during the week. Districts around Red Deer and Vilna, to the northeast, achieved the least progress but were no further behind than last year.

Wheat was yielding 22 bushels per acre in the south and 18 in the southeast, most top grade grain.

REGINA (CP) — Students attending the University of Saskatchewan are experiencing some difficulty in getting text books as a result of the nation-wide rail strike, campus spokesmen said Tuesday.

Audrey Whitaker, manager of the Regina campus book store, said the biggest problem at both Regina and Saskatoon is text books that have not previously been used on either campus.

D. E. Bates, manager of the Saskatoon campus book store, said there have been many course changes and second-hand books, which are available, are of little use in some cases.

MOOSE JAW (CP) — A $500,000 industry manufacturing glass beads for reflective material in highway signs and dividing lines is to locate in the city.

Kim Thorson, minister of industry and commerce, said the company will be 35-per-cent owned by the Saskatchewan Economic Development Corp.

The initial investment of $500,000 will also include a grant from the department of regional economic expansion of $106,400.

The company, to be known as Canasphere Industries, plans to get some of its glass from eastern Canada.

MALE IMPOTENCE: What Every Woman Should Know

A loving and concerned woman is a man's most important asset in restoring—or maintaining—his sexual capacity. That's the opinion of a leading psycho-therapist, writing in the September issue of Reader's Digest. In today's society, an increasing number of men suffer from some degree of impotence. Most such difficulties are rooted in emotional rather than physical factors, and at such times, what a wife does or says can be crucial. For guidelines that every thoughtful wife should observe, read MALE IMPOTENCE: WHAT EVERY WOMAN SHOULD KNOW. One of 35 articles and features in the September Reader's Digest. Solid Waste Brings Woes To Tiny PEI

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Solid waste management is probably the greatest environmental challenge facing Prince Edward Island at present, says Art Hiscock, chairman of the provincial environmental control commission.

The island has a hodgepodge network of some 300 old-fashioned dumps, many of which are potential sources of pollution to waterways.

"Many are burning, throwing smoke and particulate matter into the air," said Mr. Hiscock in a statement. All of them harbor rats, flies and potential disease-carrying organisms.

"Without exception, they are a blight on the island scenery and a threat to surrounding property values," he said.

None of it sits well with a province that relies on the tourist trade for income and the late Robert Schurman, then tourism minister, set up an inter-departmental committee last fall to study the problem.

The committee's role is to keep the study on schedule so that it can be completed within the six-month time limit set by Mr. Schurman.

The first stage, now under way, is to estimate the amount of waste being generated by each community and each industry, followed by projections for future production of waste based on population and landuse trends.

Mr. Hiscock said the idea is to find out where the refuse is coming from, how much there is and how much can be expected in future years.

In the second stage, the committee and its consultants will select proper sites, ensuring those selected do not jeopardize public health and safety; are acceptable to the public; avoid disruption of the environment; are compatible with area planning, and are capable of being properly developed, operated and finished.

The third stage will involve evolution of a master plan, taking into consideration the costs relative to each site chosen.

The study will then consider various processing and disposal alternatives such as sanitary landfill, incineration, and grinding and composting.

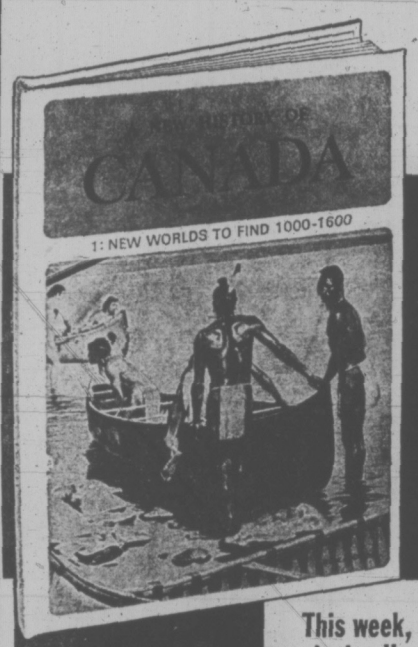

The study will encompass more than just domestic garbage.

"Besides all of the industrial wastes such as fish offal and scrap metals, there are special disposal problems to be considered," said the chairman of the environmental commission.

BETTER BUBBLY

REIMS, France (WP) — This year's champagne will be better and more plentiful than for many a year, experts said in this "champagne capital."

The production figure could be over 160 million bottles or well above last year's total.

Quality was likely to be outstanding due to the heat in August this year, making grapes full and heavy," trade officials said.

Controls Cutting Drug Abuse

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Year-old federal controls on the prescribing of methadone, a synthetic heroin substitute used for treating addicts, seem to have resulted in a sharp reduction in the abuse of the drug, according to the federal bureau of dangerous drugs.

But the same controls, introduced in June of 1872, also seem to have resulted in a significant increase in the number of thefts of methadone from drug stores and in the number of forged prescriptions for the drug.

Dr. A. B. Morrison, assistant deputy minister of health, says that this increase in crime associated with methadone is a strong "indication that the drug is no longer as available on the street" as it was before the federal controls, when large quantities were being diverted to the illicit market.

The federal controls imposed last year were the result of what federal authorities perceived to be an "alarming situation" whereby large quantities of methadone was being diverted to illicit channels and being abused by addicts.

Federal authorities maintain that the controls have since "virtually stopped" the leakage of methadone to illicit channels and have similarly nearly eliminated "double doctoring" and "promiscuous prescribing" by doctors.

Double doctoring is the practice of going to more than one doctor, to obtain the same prescription.

Heroin addicts would often then trade their extra methadone for heroin or other drugs on the illicit market.

The methadone would then be sold to other addicts as a narcotic.

Methadone, at low dosage levels, supposedly satisfies the addict's narcotic hunger without giving the addict the "high." But at high levels, methadone is believed to produce just as much of a "kick" as heroin.

Air Cleanup Eased

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Nixon administration has decided to ease clean air requirements for smelters and other industries having trouble meeting pollution deadlines, informed sources said Tuesday.

The plan is to announce new rules Thursday which would allow industries to do something less than remove pollutants that go up their smokestacks, the sources said.

The decision is sure to draw fire from conservation organizations and perhaps from Sen. Edmund Muskie (Dem—Maine), author of the Clean Air Act.

Muskie aides said Tuesday that they knew such an administration decision had been made but had not seen the details of it and thus could not comment.

Basically, the administration plans to let some industries discharge pollutants when conditions are favorable — such as on a windy day — and hold back at other times, such as when the air is still.

The rationale for this approach is that some industries would have to shut down, or at least cut back on their activities, if they were forced to comply with strict pollution rules before they had cleanup equipment installed.

The proposed "supplemental controls" of allowing industries to dilute their pollution, rather than reduce it outright, is seen by the administration as a way to provide selected industries more time to clean up without endangering the public health.

Eskimo JP Wears Several Hats

FROBISHER BAY, N.W.T. (CP) — Arthur Munick, an Eskimo and a justice of the peace, has crowded more than a lifetime into his 72 years.

He can be said to have spanned 10,000 years of human history. He is a man who has been rocketed from a stone age culture into one which has journeyed to the moon.

A man who can remember hunting with a primitive bow and arrow, he now thinks nothing of ordering wine to go with his steak. He hurtles across the North now at 30,000 feet in a jet liner.

Mr. Munick is more than a crusty, proud old man who has compressed the expectations of many generations in his lifetime. He is also one of the men who are establishing themselves as the cornerstone of law and justice in the vast wilderness of the Northwest Territories.

WHITE MAN ODDITY

It's a long way from the days at Payne Bay in Arctic Quebec where he was born and where the white man was an exotic oddity. Today, Mr. Munick is a power in his own right—and in the white man's system.

He is one of the justices of the peace who are empowered to sit in judgment of summary conviction offences under the Criminal Code.

Although his English is minimal and he presides in the tiny community of Port Burwell, perched on a sliver of rock off the coast of northern Labrador, his role is an important one.

Northern officials say he is the very foundation of the developing system of northern justice. He is able to preside over trials of his own people with full understanding of their language and cultural values.

There are only 60 people in Port Burwell so Mr. Munick wears several hats along with his legal one.

ACTS AS COP

He is a member of the settlement council, is the Anglican catechist and even does his own, unofficial, police work since the RCMP does not maintain a detachment in the community.

"I didn't really know anything about the job, but Claire Barnaby, the settlement manager, asked me to take it, and the people voted for me as policeman and JP, so I undertook to learn it," he told an interviewer.

Since that decision a year ago, he has attended conferences in Yellowknife with other JPs and learned by trial and error in his own court room just how the law works.

"I never put people in jail. We try to solve our problems by talking about them.

"The worst thing about my job is when I have to call in the police from Frobisher Bay to deal with any serious offences.

"So far, my hardest job as a JP has involved liquor offences."

WATCHES DRUNKS

He pointed out, however, that since Port Burwell is so small, he finds it easy to keep a close watch on the three persons having the most difficulty with alcohol.

In his youth, Mr. Munick trapped and hunted for the Hudson's Bay Co. He can remember his father selling prime white fox pelts to the company fur trader for one penny each.

These days, a single good pelt can bring $20, a sum that would have bought 2,000 pelts in the old days.

But even though fur prices have increased greatly in recent years, Mr. Munick doesn't want his children and grandchildren to make their living solely from the land as he once did.

"I would like to see my children able to live the best of both ways, to have the good things from the white man's world but never to forget the Eskimo way of life.

"When my son goes to work, after he's finished, he is able to go out and hunt. This is what I like about what the future holds."

Canadian Plane Victim

OAKRIDGE, Ore. (AP) — Two Eugene residents and a Canadian were killed when their light plane crashed and burned in the Cascade Mountains 17 miles southeast of Oakridge.

The victims were identified as 29-year-old Mark Carlin Wallin and 33-year-old Frank Thomas Yankovic, both of Eugene, and John Cove-Jones of Vancouver.

Sgt. Robert Purdue of the Lane County Sheriff's office said the bodies were burned beyond recognition. He said Wallin had a private pilot's licence and Yankovic was a flight instructor with Eugene Aviation but it was not known who was piloting.

Hat Theft Of $6,020 Charged

TORONTO (CP) — A Manitoba woman has been arrested and charged with theft in connection with the disappearance of more than $6,000 from a man's hat in his Toronto home.

Police said today Margaret Rose McInnes, 34, of Fort Churchill, was arrested in Perth, Ont.

They said Chong-Su Lee told them that $6,020 hidden in a hat in his home disappeared last June 3 when he went out for an hour.

None of the money has been recovered.

Oak Bay Townhouses Approved

Oak Bay's first townhouse development at the corner of Yale and Oak Bay was approved Tuesday.

A land-use contract amended to allow for freer traffic flow was adopted by council after a public hearing earlier in the evening.

The amendment allows for a 25-foot radius curb to cut across the Yennadon Holdings Ltd. development site for easier access from Yale to Oak Bay.

Nearby residents voiced concern earlier that the "terrace-houses" would lead to even more congested traffic.

Ald. Brian Smith suggested that council investigate the possibility of later making Yale a one-way street going east.

However, residents were not convinced.

"I'm all in favor of more housing," said George Morrison, 1685 Yale. "But the design is terrible and it's overpowering for the size of the property."

The blueprints call for seven two-bedroom suites and one one-bedroom unit and price estimates quoted by developer Frank Carson were pegged at $35,000 to $40,000.

Walter Dodsworth, who owns residences at 1542 and 1550 Yale criticized planning of a 12-car parking lot.

"The rear laneway traffic will be too heavy," he said.

Another resident said Yale "is nothing more than a lane now and it can't handle the extra cars. Parking will be a problem."

Council, however, agreed with Ald. Smith that the townhouse proposals was "a darn site better than most of the three-storey apartments built in Greater Victoria.

"It's better than anything else we're going to get," said Smith.

The double lot is zoned for apartment complex and the townhouse proposal provides for lower density of population than is legally allowed.

Ald. Smith said "the Yale residents' concern about traffic is well founded and we'll have to make some yellow-line provisions and a one-way proposal will have to be looked at."

★ COUNCIL COUNSELS TENANTS

Minutes after Oak Bay council decided Tuesday to plug into an inter-municipal landlord-tenant advisory bureau, aldermen found themselves in the tenant counselling business.

Two elderly Oak Bay residents brought their questions about accommodation directly to them.

"We've been told we're going to have to leave our apartment now that they've been changed to condominiums, but our other apartment isn't ready to move into yet," one woman told Mayor Frances Elford.

"We haven't been given our notice yet, but we know it's going to come — how long will they give us?"

They were assured by Ald. Brian Smith they would be given 30 days' notice because the apartment building concerned was changed to condominium before new laws were passed.

"So you'll have at least until Oct. 31."

Council decided to accept the invitation of other municipalities to join a scheme for financing the joint landlord-tenant bureau.

Ald. Douglas Watts said the existing bureau is taking calls from Oak Bay residents now and "we should meet our legal obligation as soon as possible."

Based on a four-month usage record of the Victoria bureau, Oak Bay's total cost would be $1,071 of the total $12,854, with Victoria paying the highest fee of $6,996.

Barrett Slams Pay Hike Beefs

KELOWNA (CP) — Premier Dave Barrett said Tuesday night criticism of salary raises of British Columbia cabinet ministers and MLAs is hypocritical.

The premier said no opposition member spoke or voted against salary increases which gave Barrett an annual income of $52,000, cabinet ministers $48,000 and MLAs $24,000.

He also said no one has returned the extra income.

Barrett was talking to a partisan crowd of 900 on behalf of Bryan McIver, the New Democratic Party candidate in Friday's Okanagan South byelection.

"I'm not a millionaire. I'm not the son of a millionaire. I don't intend to become a millionaire. Every cent I own is tied up in my house. If you pay cheap wages, you get cheap politicians."

Barrett accused the opposition of representing business interests because they voted against the government's tax legislation during the last session of the legislature.

"There's no fooling the people this time, they've had a taste of the people's government and they like what they see."

NOT YET —PEKING

PEKING (Reuter) — At least six countries, including Canada, Britain, France and Japan, sending students to Peking to study Chinese have been told on short notice that the course for foreign students has been delayed two months.

The course was to open at the end of this month at Peking's Linguistics Institute but has been put back to the end of November.

Chinese officials, who notified diplomats here of the delay, explained that certain unnamed countries were not yet ready to send students.

Diplomats said the Chinese decision has caused considerable inconvenience since some of the students had arrived here and most of the others were on the point of leaving for China.

Youth Survives Long Fall

Ken Neil Persey was treated for minor injuries at Lady Minto Hospital on Salt Spring Island.

"He was a lucky, lucky boy," RCMP said.

Persey and friends had gone to the cliff in Bluffs Park, overlooking Active Pass, where Persey ventured too close to the edge.

Police said the drop at that point is at least 400 feet, but Persey's fall was broken by a tree part way down.

Const. Alan Evans, assisted by several volunteers, went down the face of the cliff and rescued the youth.

Residents of the island and passing ferries shone their lights on the cliff as Evans and the volunteers scaled the side. A boat took him to hospital.

Some Deplore Police Vote Call

Future of the Central Saanich police force will likely be determined by referendum in November, Mayor Archie Galbraith said Tuesday.

"Without doubt the majority of council is in favor of going to referendum."

The mayor commented after council was presented with a petition signed by 1,558 taxpayers asking council to provide "all possible facts, considerations and costs comparing a local force with other alternatives."

There are only two possible alternatives — "join to the north with the RCMP, or join to the south with Saanich," said Galbraith.

The mayor emphasized the petitioners were not asking the police commission to disband the present force but to provide as much information as possible on costs and alternatives.

"I'm dead against going to a referendum," said Ald. David Hill, adding a petition signed by 800 ratepayers last February favored maintaining the present force.

"Something has happened . . . I don't know what it is that would make them change their minds," said Hill, "where were these people six months ago?"

"You can't talk costs when it comes to service," he said, "I won't support a referendum. I'll risk my political career on it."

Ald. Jean Butler supported a referendum saying, "We have 1,558 names on this petition which must be nearly 60 per cent of the voters in this municipality, I feel that I must support their request."

"I deplore to no end the fact that the matter of our police force has become a political issue," said Ald. Zachary Hamilton who also supported the referendum.

Ald. Ray Lamont said council will not be able to provide accurate information before November's election.

"I'm very sorry to see it come about at this time," he said. "It is going to be a political issue at the next election.

"It has put council in a very embarrassing situation but we are the servants of the taxpayers and we have to act accordingly," he said.

Galbraith agreed the "best thing to do" would be provide all possible details for the taxpayers.

A new police chief was to be selected Friday, he said.

"Those that will be interviewed will be told of the situation and we'll play it from there," he said.

BURNING RULES TIGHTENED

Instead, residents will be permitted to use their incinerators between dawn and 11 a.m. from June 1 to Sept. 30.

Burning of grass cuttings will not be permitted.

"If we ban them from burning in their backyards, they'll probably move inside and burn them in their fireplaces, which is a hazard," said Ald. Douglas Watts.

The present full ban will continue on Sundays and holidays during the summer.

A number of letters received and filed by council indicated some residents were just as strong in their criticism of a full ban as Ald. Shirley Dowell was in her support.

Mrs. Eleanor M. Howard, 150 Beach, demanded to know "what on earth people with gardens are going to do to keep their places tidy. Burning in the rainy months from October to April will surely create a lot of smog," she told council in a letter.

A. P. E. Wainwright, 2800 Somass, agreed with a total ban during the five summer months.

"I must compliment the committee for attempting to do something about the foul condition of the air in Oak Bay caused primarily by backyard incinerators and apartment house garbage burning."

Ald. Shirley Dowell felt more restrictive measures, were needed. She said the partial ban should be in effect year 'round.

"A total ban is going to come and people will just get confused if we tell them the ban is only for four months of the year."

Turkey Begins to Even Out The Ownership of Land

By DAVID ROGERS

ANKARA (Reuter) — Half a million Turkish peasants will soon be presented with land and loans to begin a new life as farmers.

They will be the main beneficiaries of one of the most important laws enacted since pre-war reforms that transformed Turkey from an Oriental sultanate into a westward-looking secular state.

The act sets out to modernize Turkish agriculture, the mainstay of the economy and biggest employer, while creating a more equitable system of land ownership.

Eight million acres will be redistributed among landless peasants. Big landowners will be stripped of two million acres and the state is contributing the other six million, though much of this is unfarmable at present.

It has taken 12 years of heated argument to get the land and agricultural reform bill on the books.

More than once it looked as though the legislation would sink to oblivion in the committee rooms of the national assembly and, in the end, the army had to prod parliament into action.

The big landowners, whose vote-winning influence is vital at election time, mounted a powerful lobby and won numerous concessions from the politicians.

Estate owners who lose property will be fully compensated. Initially they will receive at least 15 per cent of the land's value and the remainder over a period of not more than 19 years.

Alternatively they can be fully paid immediately in shares of state enterprises with a guaranteed eight-per-cent dividend.

The first to have their estates broken up will be absentee landlords in pilot regions to be announced shortly. The land will be cut into farming units which can produce an income of 25,000 liras ($1,075) annually—compared to the national average of 5,950 liras ($119).

Peasants and sharecroppers will receive credits to purchase equipment and will have 25 years to pay off interest-free loans granted to purchase land.

To encourage the new farmers to come together in larger, more efficient units, the government will offer extra incentives to co-operatives in the form of free seeds, loans and irrigation schemes.

The cry for land reform had been heard in Turkey for decades but the movement did not get under way until after the 1960 military coup which toppled the regime of Adnan Menderes.

The colonels' junta ordered 55 landlords who held feudal sway in the backward eastern regions into exile in western Turkey.

Later the need for reform was written into the liberal, 1961 constitution and when the military handed power back to the civilians, the first land bill was jabled in parliament.

Nine land bills were defeated over the years. While the politicians promised reform during elections, they appeared loath to upset big landowners by passing the legislation.

Then the army spoke. One of its main demands after toppling Suleyman Demirel's conservative Justice Party government in March, 1971, was the speedy enactment of the legislation.

Even with the military breathing down its neck, parliament needed another two years to pass the massive bill and in the process many of the more political measures were eliminated.

But, if the act is fully and justly implemented, there seems little doubt it will dramatically change Turkish agriculture. It will ensure all arable land is used and, with modern irrigation and fertilization techniques, there will be a big effort to make barren regions farmable.

How To Be An Effective Parent

A talk about being effective parents will start another year of programs sponsored by the Greater Victoria Citizens Counselling Centre Sept. 17 at 7:30 p.m.

The lecture will be given by Dr. Ron Tinney of the University of Victoria at Metropolitan United Church.

A week later, Sept 24, students will be registered for the centre's fall programs.

Programs include a marriage enrichment group, personal growth group, developing personal potential group, singles group, a family enrichment program, and a toward retirement group.

A 12-week training course for people helpers starts Jan. 7 at 7:30 p.m. and is a combination of lectures and relationship exercises.

Another recipe from the Gold Seal Galley

Salmon Continental

1 15½ oz. can Gold Seal salmon (or 2 - 7¾ oz. cans)
1 tbsp. butter
1 tbsp. flour
¼ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
1 cup evaporated milk
2 egg yolks, beaten
2 tbsp. soft butter
2 tbsp. lemon juice
20 cooked asparagus spears (or 2 cups cooked green beans)
½ cup grated sharp cheddar cheese

Blend 1 tablespoon butter, flour, salt and pepper in saucepan over low heat. Slowly add milk. Cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Slowly stir a little hot sauce into beaten egg yolks. Add to remaining sauce. Stir in soft butter and lemon juice. Place hot asparagus in large shallow casserole. Top with salmon pieces. Spoon sauce over top. Sprinkle with cheese. Broil 5-6 inches from heat until sauce is bubbly (about 5 minutes). Serves 6.

Color TV — Color TV — Color TV

This time of the year, just before the fall season begins, many people rush out to buy that long-wanted COLOR TV. There are about 50 different stores that handle about 18 different makes and 120 different models of TV's. You cannot base the quality of a TV on the amount of advertising a certain company does. Usually these TV's are sold by people who have absolutely no idea how a color TV works. They read the manufacturer's brochure, add a few things of their own and so sell you a TV. What is a good set, or not a good set? You don't really know. If it needs service you are usually referred to some other service place. Many problems can occur.. Most people that have bought color TV before know about these problems and look for someone they can depend on. Six years ago when we started selling TV's and stereos, we took on a policy which gives the customer the best possible assurance that they will get a good deal.

OUR POLICY IS:

1. We try out and check every kind and model of TV we sell first for quality, performance and dependability.
2. Our salesmen are service men at the same time. They know what they sell.
3. We offer service at half the cost to our customers who purchased a TV from us when warranty is expired, thus saving you money on costly repairs.

Taster Finds Coffee His Cup of Tea

Washington Post

He tastes tea for a living. Of course, he doesn't actually drink the stuff. He just slurps up a mouthful, savors it for a moment, and spits it out. Still, it's a lot of tea.

India grows a lot of tea, more in fact than any other country in the world. Last year, Indian tea gardens produced one billion pounds, making tea the country's second foreign exchange earner after jute.

Most Indian export tea goes to Britain, which bought 130 million pounds last year. The coffee-quaffing United States took only 6.6 million pounds. According to Singh, that included some of the poorest grades, which are used in tea bags.

It was the British who started the tea industry in India, bringing in plants from China and weaning Indians away from milk to the three times-a-day "cuppa."

Singh, a broad-shouldered, handsome man, wears a long white apron and works in a brightly lit tasting room that resembles a laboratory. When he arrives, his tea has been brewed and cooled.

"Drinking tea hot, the way most people do, doesn't allow you to get the true taste," he said.

Rules for a Good Cuppa

The brewers follow some simple rules. The water must be boiled only once.

"We found that reheating the water alters its taste," Singh said. And the tea is steeped for exactly five minutes, timed by a small hourglass filled with pink sand.

Starting at one end of a long counter, Singh looks down a row of white tea cups without handles. Behind each cup is a small mug, each topped with a strainer and a heap of soggy tea leaves. The tea is brewed individually in these mugs. Behind each mug, in a third row, are little tin boxes filled with dry tea leaves.

The testing begins. Singh picks up a cup, places it to his lips, takes a long, noisy swig, holds it, and then makes an on-target hit into a waist-high spitoon.

"Number one five eight, mark good liquors, please," he says. The judgment is quickly written down by a young man.

"You've got to suck the tea up with force," Singh explained, "in order to hit the back of your palate."

Stepping quickly along a padded runway, Singh lifts out a tin, pours the dry tea leaves into a curved piece of cardboard and then pours them back into the tin. "Number one five six shows some gold tip (good), too much stalk (bad)."

Moving along with Singh is a young man in a black apron named Crishna Vivek. He is a junior taster assigned to Singh, one of his company's five senior tasters. Vivek tastes and tests, but does not offer his opinions to the recorder.

"The only way you can become an expert tea taster is through experience," said Singh. "Some people by nature have a more sensitive palate than others. Some can become expert in five or six years, others don't even make the grade after 15 years."

Singh got into the business eight years ago. Before that he was an insurance executive and then an economics teacher.

He Grabbed the Job

"When this came my way I grabbed it," he said.

Singh works for Carritt Moran, one of Calcutta's six major tea brokers. The purpose of his tasting is to determine the value of the tea before it is offered for sale at auction.

Indians, who like their tea hot, sweet and milky, are helping make up for a decline in tea drinking in Europe and the United States, Singh said.

"Due to over production and declining consumption, tea is one of the few commodities in the world with a dropping price," he said.

Many factors go into determining the price of tea. "The same leaf can produce an excellent brew if it's picked at a particular time of day," Singh said, "or a poor cup if it's picked a few hours later."

Immediately after the leaves are picked, they are spread out in the sun to dry. During 15 or so hours in the sun they lose as much as 35 per cent of their weight. During the Monsoon, the leaves are dried mechanically by hot and cold air blowers.

The Acid Does It

Then the chopped leaves are sifted for size. The largest pieces generally are the highest quality. Going down the list of qualities, from large pieces to small, the poorest grades are called fannings and, finally, dust.

"Most of the tea that goes into tea bags—the way Americass seem to like it—is either fannings or dust," Singh said.

After a long day of tasting, Singh retires to his air-conditioned office to prepare his reports for the auction and have a cup of coffee.

Coffee?

Oh, sure," he said, "I switched from tea ages ago."

ARE FOOD PRICES TODAY REALLY A 'RIP-OFF'?

We hear this term used quite frequently these days when the price of a food commodity rises sharply. The suggestion often is that retailers are taking advantage of a supply and demand situation to increase profits over and above normal margins. At Woodward's we just do not do business that way and to be perfectly fair with our competition — no reputable firm does. We are all concerned with rising costs. Weather, crop failures, labour and shipping costs, and world demand for raw materials are just a few of the reasons we are all paying more for some of the products we buy.

Yet the money spent for food in Canada is still, as a percentage of the average family's spendable income, lower than most places in the world. We pledge that we will continue to bring you the best possible values that we can and will always try to offer alternatives and menu ideas to aid your budget.

New Morality New Biology?

WASHINGTON (WP) — When Juliet stood on the balcony being wooed by Romeo she was 14 and probably not yet able to bear children.

Since then women have been reaching sexual maturity at an earlier and earlier age. Indeed, one British scientist calculated that they have been having their first menstrual period — a sign of being able to bear children — three to four months earlier each decade.

Now other English scientists report a worldwide leveling of that trend. Studies by T.C. Dann of the University of Newcastle Upon Tyne show that the average age of the first menstrual period of girls entering an English college has held steady at 12½ years since 1964.

These figures, published in a recent issue of the British science journal Nature, match other studies in North America and Europe, which show that the average age of menarche (time of first menstrual period) has leveled off at about 12 years.

This change in the age at which girls become sexually mature has profound social, legal and moral implications. It affects the world's population crisis, the age at which sexual relations are determined to be statutory rape and the age at which women should be allowed to get married.

(Although many scientists feel that men are also becoming sexually mature earlier, there is no way to measure that as easily as the time of a woman's first period.)

"What looks like a new morality really is new biology," says Dr. Andre Hellegers, professor of obstetrics and gynecology at Georgetown University medical school and director of the centre for reproduction and bioethics there.

Hellegers said the parents wouldn't have worried in Europe 150 years ago — not because the crime situation has changed but because girls now become sexually mature at a younger age.

J. M. Tanner of the University of London, an international authority on the subject, reports that working women in Manchester, England, in 1820 reached sexual maturity at about 15½ years of age. The same holds true for other English women of that time.

Hellegers said a study of Scandinavian women in 1840 showed that they reached sexual maturity at about age 17.

In both cases, however, Tanner concluded that "menarche in Europe has been getting earlier during the last 100 years by between three and four months per decade."

Trekker Misses Hostel Reception

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — A modern Pied Piper has been attracting children with his music as he plods his way on a 300-mile trip by foot through southwestern Ontario.

The Pied Piper, Wayne Collins, 24, of Toronto, has discovered that his impromptu compositions attract children, particularly in rural areas, and apprehensive mothers who hurry out to make certain the children are safe, find themselves listening to his flute.

He said he enjoys making up little tunes as he walks — he is not a hitch-hiker much to the surprise of some motorists who have offered a lift — and he even tries composing words for his tunes.

A man with 150 pounds of gear who can produce music is such an oddity that children in farm areas run to the road to listen to him.

That's when the mothers appear. They show concern about this stranger who is evidently taking an interest in children.

Describing him as an "oddity" may not be a true description. But even he admits that the situation is unusual when a man plodding along on foot spends his time tooting on his bamboo flute instead of lifting his thumb for a ride.

He averages 15 miles a day, he said.

Collins graduated from University of Waterloo with a BA degree in history but decided to try his hand — or his feet — at hiking when his last job was finished.

There's one problem — accommodation.

Residents in urban areas look askance at a man weighted down by a pack, bedroll and an assortment of pots and pans dangling from his belt.

But he's discovered the farm folk are more approachable and do not object to allowing a wanderer to sleep in a pasture.

And there are a few things he's learned that never were on the university curriculum — how to live off the land.

"Did you know that milkweed is a tasty food?" he asked.

Small milkweed pods are boiled in a pot, water drained and then boiled a second time. Then they are edible, he said. He carried a sample of milkweed pods in one of the pockets of his pack.

He eats berries which he finds in woodlots, not touching those along roadsides which are frequently sprayed with insecticide and weed killer.

Today's hostels are 50 miles apart, convenient for cyclists or hitch-hikers.

He had planned to make the trip by bicycle, but somebody stole his bike, he said.

Collins entertains Steven Morey, 2, and Bill McMann, 6

In between living-off-the-land meals, he manages a restaurant dinner about three times a week, just to keep going.

His goal is Menoninee, Mich., where his father now lives, and he plans to visit a festival at Ann Arbor en route.

Female Student Can Dent Chivalrous Bids

LONDON (CP) — Young male teachers have been given a word of advice about girls for the opening of the British school term.

And it comes not a minute too soon if female pupils are as cunning and calculating as the Assistant Headmasters' Association (AHA) suggests.

"The first myth we would like to dispose of," the AHA says in a classroom guide, "is the feeling that girls are somehow innately more refined than their boy counterparts.

"Your chivalrous instincts are in for a buckling dent if you bring a romantically-idealized view of girls into the classroom.

"Girls are far tougher than you think and probably worse-behaved. Swearing and boisterousness can lead to shocked disenchantment for the teacher."

Not only that, a "disturbing element" may enter the situation when a teacher finds girl pupils, maybe only a few years younger than himself, exceedingly attractive.

"All we can say is that you should look for other pebbles on safer beaches," it says.

Although the book is a general guide to all male teachers on the subject of girls, it is aimed mainly at recently-qualified teachers starting their careers or those joining co-educational schools for the first time.

In dealing with a girl student who has developed a crush, a male teacher should "be brisk and rather distant, kind but scrupulously fair."

Latch-Key Child

EDMONTON (CP) — The latch-key child.

He's any age from 6 to 12, and usually wears a house key on a string around his neck. His mother works, leaving him alone in the morning to get off to school on his own.

He has to make his own lunch, unless he goes to an elementary school that provides hot lunches. And he's responsible for himself after school.

Latest figures estimate, that in Edmonton about 27,000 children under 14 have working mothers. Some of the mothers make arrangements for babysitters, housekeepers or neighbors, while others leave their children to fend for themslves.

One of the ways to meet these children's need for supervision and a caring adult when their parents are absent is a type of day-care often called 8-12-4 programs.

There are only two such programs in Edmonton now, but there's a move by parents and day-care personnel to start more this fall.

Sheila Campbell, director of day-care for the city, says the average cost of such programs which usually run in the early morning, noon hour and after school is about $3 a day per child.

"That's not expensive in terms of what the kids do when they're not supervised — from physical destruction of property to developing emotional problems," she says.

"I believe a child should be supervised up to the age of 12, or 10, at the absolute minimum. They're impulsive and not able to think of consequences.

In the summer holidays, the 8-12-4 programs become similar to regular day-long day-care, with a program of "things like parents might do with their own child in the summer — swimming, movies, going to the playground."

The space available in schools with declining enrolments could be used for programs for latch-key children, suggests Mrs. Campbell.

Ripe Bananas Full of Value

By HILDA BEASTALL

Bananas are a good food buy for their valuable nutrients. As listed in a bulletin called Nutrient Values of Some Common Foods from the Department of National Health and Welfare, we find that ripe bananas are a good source of Vitamins A, B, and C, also of several essential minerals.

We know from practical experience that a ripe banana gives lasting energy when a quick snack is needed. This is because the natural sugar it contains is easily digested and turned into energy.

Maximum value is obtained from the fully ripe fruits having darkened skins although this sign varies with the different varieties imported and displayed in local stores. The larger fruit departments frequently offer these darkened skin bananas at a reduced price, 10 cents a pound instead of between 14 and 20 cents. The thrifty homemaker makes free use of them for that time. Usually the inside fruit is firm and good.

A word of warning about bananas, don't keep them in the refrigerator. As with some other tropical fruits, they cannot cope with cold conditions, the cells rupture and the fruit are lost. Keep them in the coolest part of the kitchen in the air.

A sandwich of wholewheat bread filled with sliced ripe banana and Cheddar cheese is a sustaining meal at noon if a small lunch has to be carried. A sprinkle of wheat germ and brewer's yeast powder adds extra lasting power. Make the sandwich in the morning, not overnight, or it won't be worth eating.

At home, a complete quick tasty meal for children from school is put together as a salad.

BANANA SALAD WITH COTTAGE CHEESE

Combine 2 c. cottage cheese, 1 Tbsp chopped parsley (or chervil, or chickweed tops), ½ c. finely shredded carrots, 1 Tbsp chives or finely chopped onion (optional). Few grains salt.

Cut 4 peeled bananas in half lengthwise, place on bed of watercress or lettuce. Serve 2 big spoonsful of salad mixture on each.

These amounts serve four.

Some loss of vitamins takes place when bananas are cooked, but fully ripened fruit can be used as a moisture and sweetening ingredient to make a banana flavored loaf.

BANANA BREAD

1 Tbsp brown sugar
¾ c. soft margarine
2 small eggs lightly beaten
1 Tbsp lemon juice and pulp
3 bananas, fully ripe, mashed
½ c. water with ¼ c. skim milk powder
1 c. unbleached flour
1 c. wholewheat flour
1½ tsp baking powder
1 Tbsp wheat germ
1 tsp powdered brewers yeast
¼ tsp salt
½ c. chopped unsalted peanuts

Mix in order given. Spoon into greased loaf pan. Bake at 350 degs. for about 30 minutes or until a clean knife comes out clean.

This is moist and good when sliced and sandwiched with Cheddar cheese, or sliced thick to serve topped with cottage cheese and a spoonful of chunks. This bread should be used in the first two days from cooking. It does not keep well unrefrigerated.

DEATHS HIGHER

LONDON (UPI) — Babies born to mothers who smoke die just after birth 30 per cent more often than those born to non-smoking mothers, a British report said Wednesday.

Harvey Goldstein, statistician of the National Children's Bureau, said in the bureau's journal "Concern", the figures applied to mothers who smoke regularly after the fourth month of pregnancy.

He said they were based on a study of data on babies who die just before birth and in the period up to 100 hours afterward.

"If a well-known drug was suddenly found to cause the deaths of 1,500 new-born babies a year it would be unlikely ever to be used again," Goldstein wrote.

"Nevertheless, on the best available evidence, this is roughly the number of babies who died in Britain last year because their mothers were smoking cigarettes during pregnancy."

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Job Ills Report Chides Labor, Business

"Bitter Wages" is the title of a remarkable book, based on an immense amount of research; it is the report of Ralph Nader's study group on disease and injury on the job, edited by Joseph A. Page and Mary-Win O'Brien.

According to the report, every workday 50 people die on the job, and more than 6,000 are injured; every year, 100,000 people die of job-related diseases; another 400,000 are suffering from diseases that were probably produced by some harmful chemical inhaled during their work. Workers suffer and die from horrible diseases often resulting from the conditions in which they work hard to earn their living and support their family: diseases like cancer, black lung, brown lung, silicosis, mercury poisoning, asbestosis, pesticide poisoning, and many others.

As Ralph Nader says, for too long, business, labor and government have ignored these statistics, for a number of reasons. For example, industrial firms do not report all the actual injuries and diseases incurred on the job. Plant physicians and safety engineers are often discouraged from reporting their findings honestly, because any occupationally related diognosis they make costs their employers money, and if a lawsuit arises out of his diagnosis, the doctor might be summoned as a witness against his employer.

Also, many state safety laws and regulations are weak and there is little enforcement and less recognition for many occupational diseases as being on-the-job hazards. Union leaders seem to be more interested in collective bargaining and the allocation of union funds than in fighting for the safety of the men who should be receiving the funds — if they live long enough.

Nader tells about a certain nader, tells about a certain Mr. Smith who works in a plant where employees are exposed to mercury and chlorine. Smith said, "My father worked in a chemical plant next door to the one where I work for about 20 years. He's dead now. An uncle worked in a chemical plant right next door to me. He died of cancer in the throat. A certain chemical that he inhaled got in his throat, and his throat was a mess and he died. These chemicals are going to kill us all."

Nader says that since the beginning of the Industrial Revolution, workers have taken for granted that there would be disasters and dangers associated with their work, but only recently have they begun to wonder if conditions can be changed.

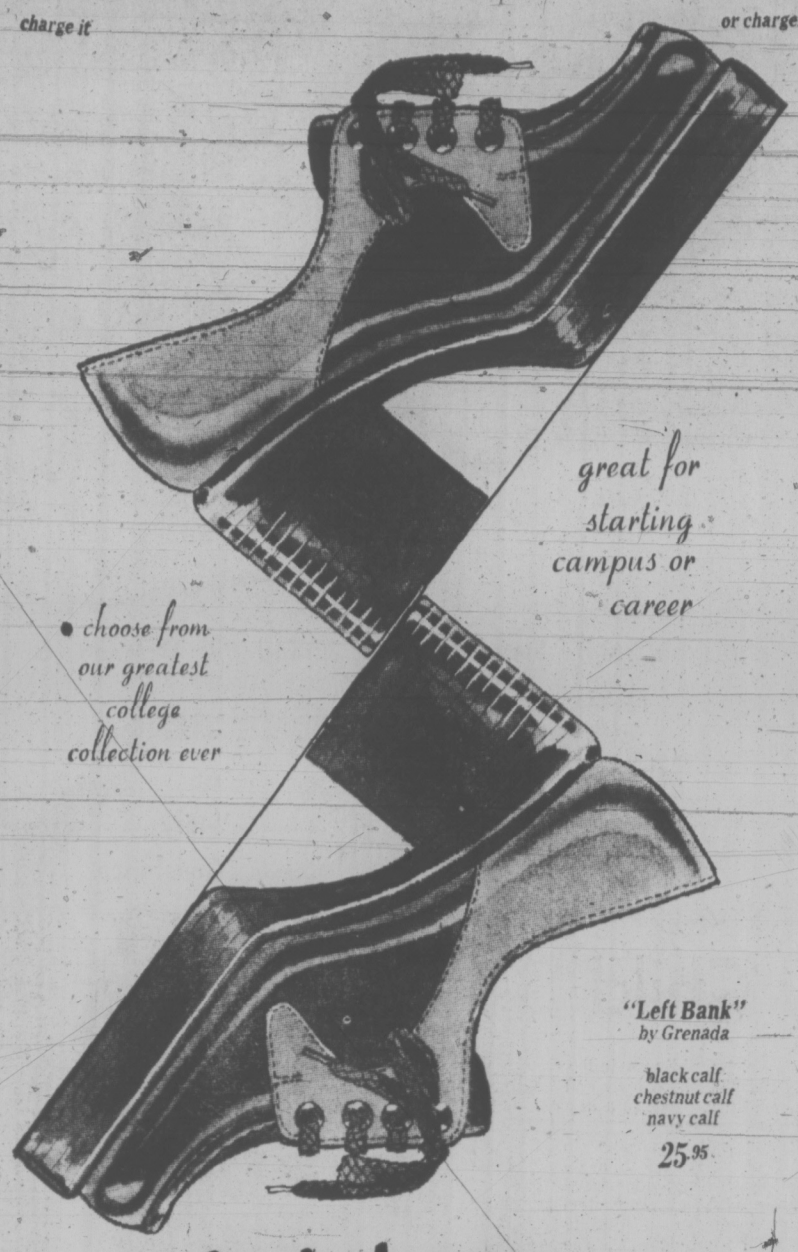

Lou Laplaca, president of Local 1668 of the United Auto Workers, testified in 1970 that at a certain company where the workers primarily use metallic pigments and powders, "There is a constant haze of dust . . . If you have seen the Wizard of Oz, there is a character called the Tin Man. Every man who comes out of there looks like the Tin Man. Metallic dust covers his eyes, nose, face, clothes. It is in his pores."

MEDIEVAL RESEARCH is being done by the Leslie Huggett family, which goes to England later in September to spend six months researching 12th-century music, dance and other medieval entertainment. The Ottawa family has become internationally known for their performance of Renaissance entertainment coupled with contemporary songs.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Thurs., Sept. 6

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21—April 19): What occurs now is apt to have a lasting effect. Know it and review position. Don't play games with emotions — or security. Accent is on where you stand, where you are going and what you intend to do when you arrive. Libra might figure in important way.

TAURUS (April 20—May 20): Highlight independent stance. Be creative. Shake off tendency to procrastinate. Relative who sings the blues should not be permitted to restrict you. Experiment. Give full play to intellectual curiosity. Write, read and stimulate learning process.

GEMINI (May 21—June 20): Your ability to perceive, to judge, to know at a glance is emphasized. Some claim you have ESP. This is a time when you can use extrasensory aid. Aquarian could challenge. One who holds money strings acts in puzzling manner. Get answers — fast.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): Lie low. Forces tend to be scattered. Avoid trying to have a hand in everything. Check signals with Sagittarian. Mate, partner figure prominently. You may not have freedom to invest without first checking — know it and don't forget it.

LEO (July 23—Aug. 22): You must not commit yourself in way that bridges are burned. Some persons who presently disagree with you may eventually become your staunch supporters. Know it and act in mature, compassionate manner. Improve relations with co-workers.

VIRGO (Aug. 23—Sept. 22): Affair of heart may be on "troubled waters." Means emotional responses could dominate logic. Jealousy gets upper hand if you so permit. Your desires are close to fulfillment. Don't ruin chances by outbursts not becoming one of your intelligence.

LIBRA (Sept. 23—Oct. 22): Adjustment in home area is indicated. Taurus person could play important role. Accent is on decision involving property purchase or sale. Much also centers around luxury items, products which make life more comfortable, if not more beautiful.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Much appears elusive. You can't seem to pin people down to definite commitment. Key now is to perceive, to be disciplined and patient while waiting. Give yourself room — and time — to revise. First draft of document could be riddle with misconceptions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22—Dec. 21): Emphasis is on assets, deficits. You will draw line — means you decide what you need now as distinguished from what is desired. Taurus, Libra and Capricorn persons are likely to play roles. Take precautions against loss of valuables.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22—Jan. 19): Past commitment makes "reappearance." You face responsibilities — could involve partnership, marriage. Aries, Libra might figure prominently. You can work your way toward success goal but there are obstacles. Support comes from unusual source.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20—Feb. 18): What appears an obstacle could boomerang in your favor. Someone probably is working behind scenes for your benefit. Realize it and keep the faith. Leo might be involved. Secret could come to light. Have alternatives at hand.

PISCES (Feb. 19—March 20): Friends may air disputes. Maintain neutral stance. One in authority appears argumentative. This condition is temporary. Know it and don't be too quick to pass judgment. Money situation is at crux of matter.

Selection Prejudiced

DEAR ABBY: I was brought up (and I brought my own children up) to "be friends with everybody, but to marry your own kind."

Would you consider this prejudice?

I have respect for all religions and colors, and have friends of all denominations, but I do not condone or believe in intermarriage. I try to find the good in the individual, regardless of color, creed or origin. Marriage is difficult enough without the problems of intermarriage presents.

Would you please give me your opinion? — Not Prejudiced.

DEAR NOT: I agree, marriage is difficult, and marrying one's "own kind" may possibly reduce the number of problems. (It may not.) But I believe in the right of every adult to marry whomever he wants. Were you to bring up your children to try to find the good in the individual, regardless of color, creed or origin, and respect his right to make his own choice, then I would say you were not prejudiced.

DEAR ABBY: I wish you could tell me how to solve a problem which has been bothering me for a long time, but has gotten worse lately.

I am over 65 years old, and my eyesight is growing dim, even with eyeglasses. I do all my own housekeeping, cooking, washing, etc. My daughter-in-law comes here quite often, and she always points out a speck of dust I missed in a corner, or a few crumbs I overlooked on the table, or some fingerprints on my refrigerator.

I am not a careless housekeeper, Abby, but I just can't see as well as I used to, and her constantly finding something I overlooked makes me feel bad. Is there some way I can let her know how much this bothers me? When I know she's coming I look for these little things she might find, but my heart grows heavy because she always finds something I missed. Help me. — Hurt.

DEAR HURT: The next time "The Inspector" visits, greet her with: "If you should see a speck of dust, a crumb or a fingerprint I overlooked, please don't mention it as I do the best I can, but my eyes aren't what they used to be." And if she forgets, remind her as often as necessary.

DEAR ABBY: The population of this town is 1,200. There is to be a wedding here soon. Two hundred and fifty invitations were sent for the service and reception.

Some of those invited do not know the bride and groom or their parents very well. Two friends of the bride's mother organized a shower with a guest list of 80 women. Again, many invited were practically strangers.

The two hostesses of this shower gave telephone lists to several women, who were supposed to invite the guests by phone. They agreed to do so.

The night of the shower there hadn't been a single regret, so 80 women were expected. A hall was rented and chairs and tables set up, and food and drinks were on hand for 80. Only 15 women showed up, including the bride-to-be, her mother, and the hostesses!

I was there, and it was the saddest, most embarrassing shower I've ever witnessed.

We later learned that the women who accepted the telephone lists disapproved of this kind of shower. So they just didn't call anyone. They also didn't bother to tell the hostesses of their decision.

Some women who were not called said they would have come. Others said they were glad they were not called. Regardless of the rights and wrongs of such a shower, who was responsible for this humiliating event?—An Interested Party.

DEAR INTERESTED: Obviously, the women who accepted the telephone lists and decided not to call anyone, but failed to advise the hostesses of their decision were responsible. Shame on them.

CONFIDENTIAL TO S. F.: No one said it better than Mark Twain: "Grief can take care of itself, but to get the full value of joy, you must have someone to share it with."

Run for Office Should Start Now

elizabeth forbes

Decision of Alderman Edith Gunning to bow out of Saanich Council at the end of this year, whittles the number of women in the four core municipalities of Greater Victoria down to Mayor Frances Elford and Alderman Shirley Dowell, both of Oak Bay.

This presents a challenge to every women's organization in Greater Victoria, including the vocal women's lib newcomers.

At one time or another they have all voiced the opinion that more women should be encouraged to take an active part in the public life of the various communities.

Therefore, they will not be fulfilling their duty now if they do not make a determined effort to increase the number of women on civic and municipal councils.

While agreeing to the substance of this, need members of such organizations do not seem to know how to approach the task. In effect they ask "but what can we do?"

The end of October is far too late to become concerned about supporting a woman for office. The campaign should be launched now. (Indeed, it should have been started weeks ago.)

Talk. Urge. Encourage. Advise. Persuade. And once a woman places her name in the ring, help her to form her ideas and to find opportunities for speaking in public.

In doing this it should be remembered that a candidate needs a platform. So, any organization that urges a woman to run for office must be alert to civic problems.

Next step is to bring the right woman and the right problems together. Here let me say that I believe the choice of women for candidates is extremely important.

The few women we have had — and do have — in civic and municipal government are outstanding. We must continue to elect women with the same qualities.

Awhile back I read an article that set out some of the qualifications needed if a woman is to succeed in public life. In it were four definite requirements for success.

The woman does not necessarily have to belong to a group or organization but she must:

1. Be intelligent and well educated. Her formal education may have been limited, but it is what and how much she has learned, not where she has learned it, that is important.

2. She must have a grasp of the real problems of that facet of public life she is seeking. If her platform is trivial, she can do very real harm to the cause of women in public life.

3. She must have the ability to speak. She needs a good command of English, a ready wit, an easy flow of language, a pleasant speaking voice.

4. She must have poise and a pleasing appearance. Manners rather than mannerisms, and grooming regardless of fashion. In short, a woman candidate must be a woman who can command the respect and admiration of the general public.

Finally, there is the problem of the actual campaign. No one is elected to public office without considerable effort on the part of a large number of enthusiastic people.

A women candidate should seek support from all women's clubs and groups. They will be glad to support a member of their own sex if they have confidence in her ability. And women in club life are usually voting women.

A woman candidate should also go to the housewife for support. These women often know little of the qualifications of candidates, and many of them do not go to the polls.

Therefore a woman candidate and her supporters should canvass this very important part of the voting body and get them out to vote.

Finally, a woman should seek support from the men in the community.

I believe if a woman candidate can persuade men that she is capable and will work for the good of the community, she will have gone a long way toward ensuring success at the polls.

In these few paragraphs I may not have pinpointed all the answers to the question — what can we do to encourage women to participate actively in civic and municipal government?

What I have tried to do, however, is suggest that if anyone or any group wishes to see more women elected in this Greater Victoria area, they must start work on it now!

By HARRIET HART

You can watch grouse throughout the year, but right now this can be a particularly fascinating and informative pursuit. If you search carefully through the woods, you will likely find many traces of ruffed grouse, if they are there at all.

The four-page leaflet "Grouse" tells you that the ruffed grouse, also called a partridge, is common throughout most of Canada.

At mating time hens are wooed by the male with a drumming sound. The Indians called the ruffed grouse 'the carpenter bird', because they thought it drummed by beating its wings against a log. Actually, the sound is produced as the bird beats its wings rapidly against the air.

Also intriguing is the life history of the grouse and how it goes about protecting its young, particularly before they are able to fly.

An 'Unknown' Airline Makes News

Washington Post

WASHINGTON—For an airline which few people have ever heard about, Southern Air Transport has had a lot going for it the past few years.

It gets guaranteed loans from some of the biggest banks. It has some of the choicest markets in the lucrative passenger charter service field. And hovering over it like a helpful big brother, it seems, is the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

The CIA's sponsorship and apparent control of the Miami-based airline emerges from the details of an unusual and super-secret case before the Civil Aeronautics Board.

It's been widely known for years that the CIA financed its own airline, called Air America. Now it appears that the spooks of Langley, Va., have another airline—one which was indirectly financed through Air America.

It came out when one of the owners of Southern Air's stock, Stanley Williams, sought permission to buy out the stock held by two other supposed owners.

Instead of a public hearing, CAB administrative Judge Milton Shapiro granted a motion for executive sessions.

It's not unprecedented, but there seems to be only one other case of an acquisition hearing being held in private because of "national defence" considerations.

Other charter airline companies got wind of Williams' plan to buy out Southern Air and filed objections.

Their main complaint: The company had been built with help from government agencies and could become a "serious competitor" because of that federal support.

Lawyers for the competing airlines — World Airways, Inc., Trans International Airlines, Inc., and others — were bound in an oath of silence administered by Shapiro. They can't talk about the case and Shapiro won't either.

In the record, however, are exhibits and documented pleadings which the lawyers prepared to show Southern Air's connection to the CIA. The exhibits show the following:

In the past four years, Southern Air has received about $6.7 million in loans from a corporation called Actus Technology. Southern Air still owes Actus $3 million. Actus, it turns out, also owes $3,125,000 dollars to Air America, the CIA's more well-known airline. Actus, charged the competing air transport companies, is merely a "conduit" for money flowing from Air America to Southern Air.

About one-third of Southern Air's fleet of planes is leased from Air America. And, it is charged, Southern Air also is dependent upon Air America and its subsidiaries for maintenance and ground handling services.

Southern Air has been the recipient of loans from two prominent banks totalling $6.6 million. The loans were guaranteed by the Pacific Corp., which is said to be the parent company for Air America.

The competing air transport companies are trying to block the sale to Williams by arguing that the company has violated CAB law in the past. It has done so, legal briefs argue, by changing its stock ownership several times without getting approval by the CAB.

Therapy For Drunks

CALGARY (CP) — Group therapy has replaced pink slips in dealing with alcoholics who are costing employers across Canada an estimated $1 million a day by being absent, accident-prone and inefficient.

It just didn't always work to fire employees with drinking problems. Authorities quote studies showing that many employees with drinking problems are among the cream of the work force, highly talented and sometimes even brilliant—when sober.

Most are between 35 and 55 years of age, married, have children and have been on the job an average of 10 years. In Calgary, they constitute about five per cent of the business community, says Mac Dalgleish of the Calgary alcohol and drug abuse commission.

"There is a new, enlightened attitude in Calgary towards employees with a drinking problem, and we welcome it," he said in an interview. In years past, they would have been fired, but that means an awful waste of talent because in many cases they were an asset to the company.

"Now, employers are looking at drinking as a sickness. They are saying: 'Look, we need you—but we need you sober. We think you need treatment and we are prepared to give you the opportunity to get this monkey off your back. But if you don't take advantage of this chance, we will have to fire you.'"

Imperial Oil of Calgary regards alcoholism in business as a sickness, outranked in seriousness only by cancer and heart diseases. Officials say the company believes in a policy of "constructive coercion," which means, bluntly, that the employee reforms or loses his job.

"Employees with a drinking problem are eligible for all normal sickness benefits while they undergo treatment," said Dr. Alden Hansen, a physician with Imperial Oil. "That's the major change in attitude in industry in the last few years."

"Many employees who have a drinking or drug problem are people who are excellent workers under normal circumstances. We want to keep them if we can. But if they have no intention of taking advantage of the help offered, they have to go."

Larger Share Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Mayor Art Phillips says he hopes to meet with Attorney-General Alex Macdonald this week to try to persuade the provincial government to pay a larger share of the costs of operating provincial court facilities in Vancouver. He said provincial court judges have asked that all 14 courtrooms in the new courthouse be fully secured so trials of high-risk prisoners can take place in any courtroom.

Ed Krueger speaks his mind on mining.

"You might ask how the tourist business and mining have anything in common and a couple of years ago I'd have asked the same question," says guest ranch operator Ed Krueger. "Now we've got a copper mine in the district and one way or another, tourism in the Cariboo is even better. Sure, mining uses some land that used to be cattle pasture but it brings so many new families and other businesses that it's got to be one of the best bargains going these days. If it does anything, mining helps the Cariboo as a tourist area."

Two Shows to Take In For Gardening Guidance

Emphasis is changing in many areas of gardening, making it important for us to assess shows this fall for changes to meet future needs.

Thoughts have been expressed in more than one local garden club that shows should be dropped from their schedules because public interest is decreasing. And this at a time when the public is highly budget minded, and nutrition conscious.

More than at any time during the past 30 years, the public is seeking guidance and advice on home production of quality food.

Where food is grown, flowers will follow. In many cases the two are on the same plants.

This weekend you have a two-day chrysanthemum and dahlia show and a one-day fall vegetable and flower show to increase your general gardening interest.

* * *

On Friday and Saturday see the early varieties of chrysanthemums and the whole range of dahlias as shown by the Victoria and District Chrysanthemum Society.

Only these two kinds of flowers will be seen Friday and Saturday in Centennial United Church Hall, Gorge Road East. Entrance to the hall is off David Street, just around the corner from the church. Show times: Friday 2 to 10 p.m.; Saturday 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.

If you are familiar with dahlias and chrysanthemums you will note new varieties. If you already grow many of these gorgeous late summer-early fall blooms, you will examine the prize winners.

Then you will be smart if you decide to do some showing yourself for you probably have as good at home. Sept. 14 and 15 are the dates for the Victoria Horticultural Society's two-day show.

* * *

A one-day fall show this Saturday from 2 until 9 p.m. is the 19th annual for Gordon Head Garden Club.

Showing in the Gordon Head Recreation Centre on Lambrick Way at 1744 Feltham Road, will be all kinds of late summer and early fall flowers, plus vegetables and fruits. Forty classes for the food crops are designed to cover just about everything grown here. With variety names on most exhibits, newcomers to this area will get clues as to what will do best in their new gardens.

Apartment dwellers will like the house plant section in this show. There is a class for indoor planters, for cacti, African violets, other flowering house plants, and for the first time a class for terrariums, sub titled bottle gardens.

The gardening groups which change with the times and render the service gardeners are seeking will receive full public support for their efforts.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

If a title were required for this deal, a fitting one would be: "There, but for the grace of God, go all of us." In the deal, our East-West defenders lost a heap of points for no reason other than that they happened to be sitting East-West. Had any of us been sitting in the same positions, we would also have become victims of circumstances beyond our control.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	2 ◇	3 ◇	4 ♣
Pass	4 NT	Pass	5 ◇
Pass	6 ♡	Pass	Pass Pass

Opening lead: Four of ◇.

Neither side vulnerable. East deals.

Opening lead: Four of diamonds.

I'm reasonably certain that the only two people who would approve of the North-South bidding would be North and South. But South played the hand is clairvoyant fashion, to achieve the optimum result.

West's opening diamond lead was captured by South's ace, after which the king and ace of clubs were cashed. Next came a third club lead, declarer ruffing with his jack. When both East and West followed suit to this third club lead, the board's two remaining clubs had just become promoted into winners.

At this point, probably most players, had they been occupying the South seat would have cashed dummy's ten and nine of trumps indulging in the wishful thinking that the four outstanding trumps would be divided 2-2. Had this line of play been adopted, our declarer would have gone down, since East, in the actual set-up, would have ruffed the fourth club lead.

But declarer, after ruffing the third club lead, led a trump to dummy's nine, picking up West's singleton trump. Then, without cashing the ten of trumps, he played the board's high eight of clubs. East ruffed this lead with his next-to-last trump, and South overruffed.

Returning to dummy via the trump ten (picking up East's remaining trump enroute), declarer next led the board's remaining club, discarding thereon his seven of spades. He then played a spade off dummy — and South's king became his slam-going trick.

Actually, there was logic in South's line of play. There were only 15 high-card points outstanding, and East, who had opened the bidding, rated to have almost all of them. Hence West's bid of three diamonds had to be based on distributional values, with probably a singleton. And the most likely place for him to have a singleton was in the heart suit.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Tom emptied his wallet. "That's all I have, just fourteen bucks," he said. "But it will help."

"Great!" exclaimed Ann, noting the amount on her list. "I had collected an average of $2.22 per head, but now you've hiked the average to $2.41. Thank you so much."

How much was the new total?

(Answer tomorrow).

Yesterday's answer: BULL was 1439 (prime).

PLAYING WITH FIRE — A racing driver's suit, treated with a new chemical process, protects the wearer as he walks through a fire at a demonstration in London. The treatment was developed by the International Wool Secretariat and can be applied cheaply in the manufacture of carpets, upholstery, blankets and children's wear.

System's Fine Unless There's a Rail Strike

Stodelle and Family roll through Mexico on a 1925 railroad club car the 46-year-old advertising executive salvaged from the Union Pacific Railroad for $2,000 in 1969.

"I found her in dead storage with the windows boarded up, a half-inch of sand on the carpet and the car scheduled to be broken up for scrap," Stodelle recalls.

But beneath the sand and grime lay deep carpeting and luxurious outfittings favored by wealthy travellers who once rode the Portland Rose from Portland, Ore., to Chicago.

Stodelle, his wife Elaine and their three children refurbished the car for $4,000 and got permission from the Mexican government to ride the country's railroads.

Now, for the price of 18 to 25 first-class tickets, depending on the distance, they can hitch their private car to any Mexican passenger train, invite a dozen friends along and cruise through the Mexican countryside.

The car has 17 bunk beds, a lounge equipped with plush sofas, club chairs and card tables, a kitchen and a private bar.

A generator runs the lighting system, air conditioner and piped-in radio. The Stodelles have repainted the interior and added new drapes.

The car, berthed southeast of here in Mexicali, makes six to eight trips a year and can travel anywhere in Mexico's interconnecting railway system. Once it was pulled 2,000 miles to Yucatan on the Guatemalan border. Stodelle says he is one of half a dozen Americans and Mexicans who run private cars on Mexico's rails.

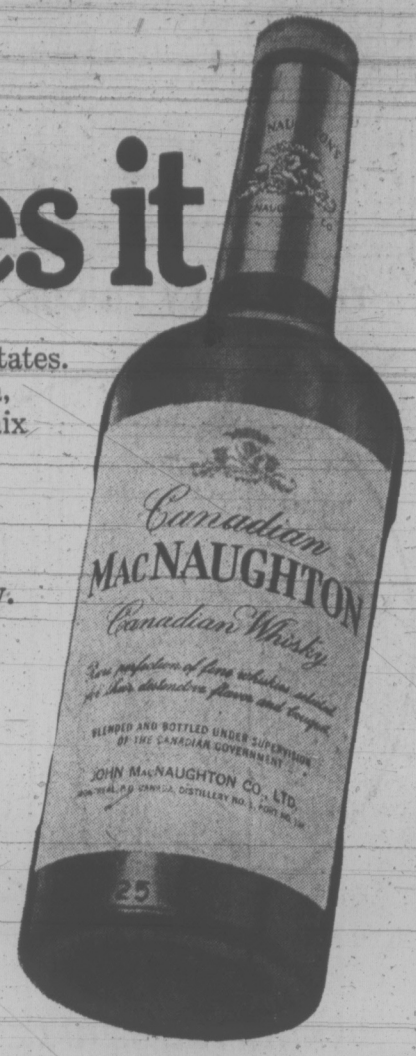

"When we see a place we want to stay, we just disconnect the car from the train and stay on a siding until we get ready to leave," he says. "Then we connect onto the next convenient train."

LIGHTS GO OFF IN WELLINGTON

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (CP) — Every second street light is being turned off in the cities of New Zealand.

Linemen are undertaking the task in an effort to avoid power cuts as supplies of electricity run critically low.

The worst drought in 50 years is drying up the lakes which supply the water for the hydro stations.

Emergency laws have been passed banning the lighting of window displays except for security purposes.

The hours of transmission for the country's government-run television channel have been been in an effort to get people to go to bed early and turn off their lights and heaters.

Hot water heaters are only allowed to be on for certain number of hours a day and regional electricity authorities are being rationed as to the amount of electricity they can use.

Despite these regulations, the water level in the lakes has continued to drop.

People preparing for the worst have caused a run on candles and coal. In some areas coal has become scarce because of the demand.

Winter rain and snow in the catchment areas for the lakes have been at record lows. Ironically a blizzard which dropped five feet of snow in parts of the South Island was in areas where it would not aid the lake levels.

Three more power stations are to be built in the next five years. These will use gas from a vast offshore field. Their generating output will be more than all the hydro stations put together, but this will not be in time to ease the present crisis.

And unless there are heavy rainfalls between now and the approaching summer the crisis could continue next winter.

WHIPPING POST SOUGHT BY SHERIFF

HAGERSTOWN, Md. (UPI) — Sheriff Charles Price already has a noose and a gallows — but if you can come up with a ball and chain or a whipping post he'd be thankful.

Price, in his third term as county sheriff, is a collector of methods used to punish criminals. He'd like to establish a museum to display them.

Sabotage Fails To Deter Action

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The general manager of Richmond Braves says some members of the International League baseball team tried to flood the field to avoid playing a season-ending doubleheader Monday night.

Roger Bottorff said parts of the field were soaked overnight Sunday and the pitcher's mound was turned into a hill of mud in a deliberate attempt to make Parker Field unplayable.

He said that when the team came home from a road trip Sunday night, some players inserted hoses under tarpaulins covering home plate and the pitcher's mound and also placed a hose near second base, then left the water running all night.

The ground crew cleaned up that mess, he said, but late that afternoon other players dumped "what looked like 50 gallons of water on the ground."

Despite the attempts at sabotage and a brief thunderstorm late Monday afternoon, the Braves played and won both games 6-4 and 6-1.

Bottorff said he would hold up giving out final paycheques and travelling expenses to all team members until those involved admit their guilt.

ONE GOOD TURN . . .

NEW YORK (AP) — The old saying, "one good turn deserves another," has a special meaning for motorists planning to turn into a side street parking lot or intersecting highway, a traffic safety expert cautions.

"There's a right way and wrong way to make turns," says George E. Wilson, executive vice-president of C.I.T. Service Leasing Corp., a company with a vital stake in the safe operation of the thousands of cars and trucks it leases to motor fleet operators.

Wilson ticks off four basic rules for making turns without endangering your own life or the lives of others:

"Look ahead, decide where you want to turn and be in position when you get there.

"Start your turn signal well in advance.

"Be considerate. When making a turn, yield the right of way to any vehicle or pedestrian near enough to be a hazard.

"By planning and executing your turns properly, you'll be doing a good turn for yourself as well as for others."

Rajah Went From Riches To Rags!

INDORE, India (AP) —A cheap cotton rug covered the cement floor. A single fan hung from the bare ceiling, lazily flipping the muggy air. The Raja of Piploda sat cross-legged on a sofa.

"Don't you see the finery?" he asked with a sarcastic sweep of the hand, and the question told a story of lost wealth, the reverse of the rags-to-riches theme.

"How did it affect me? My personal experience was that I was drinking whisky 20 days a month before and now I drink it 15 days," Singh joked.

PAID BY STATE

Three years ago Singh was on the government payroll for 36,000 tax-free rupees a year—about $4,800. He hardly needed the income from 52 fertile acres he owns about 30 miles from Indore, a textile and trading centre 325 miles northeast of Bombay.

"Now I'm basically a farmer," Singh said, pouring himself a beer.

Singh is 36 and chunky, looks older, and wears a salwar-kemeez, a traditional rural Indian ensemble of baggy pants and loose overblouse. Most people still call him "raja" or "your highness," despite the government edict reducing him to a commoner.

His transportation is a little Indian-made Fiat, his city house a yellow stucco bungalow. One of the few luxuries he still enjoys is 14 servants, one fewer than he employed as a prince.

Before Mrs. Gandhi pushed through the anti-maharaja law in 1971, the government paid 278 former rulers 48 million rupees annually — $6.4 million. Most of the maharajas and rajas got larger government allowances than Singh—the highest was 2.5 million rupees, $333,000 paid to the Maharaja of Mysore.

LIVED WITHOUT

To live without the largesse, some turned to business or continued full-time the businesses they had set up as princes. Others, like the Maharaja of Jaipur, have opened their palaces to the public as museums or hotels.

A few of the former princes have sued, claiming the law violates the constitutional provision setting up the allowances in exchange for accession to India in the late 1940s of the former princely states. Current Indian politics make their chances of winning the suit slight.

The pomp that formerly accompanied the Indian royalty died out long before the subsidies were ended.

The only time I had any of that sort of thing was at my coronation in 1949", said Singh, whose state, Piploda, had a population of 8,000.

SMALL CROWNING

"You know, it was like the Queen, except her Coronation is on a very, very big scale. Ours was just peanuts."

Despite frequent jokes about his title and subsequent loss of it, Singh occasionally reveals deep bitterness.

"Now I tell you we have become third-rate citizens," he said. "Foreigners come to India for antiques. Well, we have berome antiques now.

"I think we are the vietims of political murder."

Mrs. Gandhi campaigned in 1971 mostly on the princes question, saying throughout India that paying princes for nothing had no place in the socialist, egalitarian state she was trying to build. She won a two-thirds parliamentary majority and immediately abolished the former rulers.

PNE SETS RECORD

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Pacific National Exhibition has closed after setting an attendance record for the 17-day fair of 1,289,457, an increase of 96,000 over 1972, the previous best.

Labor Day attendance was 109,287, up 23,000 from Labor Day a year ago.

Blanshard Purchase Is Urged

Victoria city council is being urged to buy outright and then dispose of the scattered property remnants left in the wake of the Rose-Blanshard urban renewal scheme.

The action, recommended Tuesday by council's zoning committee, involves buying from the federal-provincial-municipal partnership some 15 parcels of land dotted around the periphery of the housing complex, on both sides of Blanshard.

The purchase price of $323,243, the committee suggests, should be provided from the city's $1.1 million land investment fund. Land area totals nearly 79,000 square feet, almost all of which has been valued by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation at $4 per square foot.

Aldermen endorsed the view of city manager Jim Bramley that the parcels be amalgamated with some property in the area which is already city-owned, for eventual sale or lease to interested parties.

Olympic Games Killings Marked

TEL AVIV (CP) — The murder of 11 Israeli sportsmen at the Munich Olympic Games a year ago today led to "an intensification of our activity in combatting terrorism," says the expert who led Israel's battle against Arab guerrillas.

Increased Israeli measures against terrorist attacks have been largely successful since the Olympic killings and more than 70 per cent of known guerrilla actions were thwarted before they could be carried out, says retired Gen. Aharon Yariv.

Yariv, who headed Israel's military intelligence for eight years, served as Premier Golda Meir's adviser on terrorism until he resigned to manage her party's election campaign.

Israel itself postponed commemorating the anniversary of the Olympic horror. The day will be marked Sept. 23, the anniversary date according to the Hebrew Calender.

Munich planned a brief memorial, but Ilana Romano, widow of the weightlifter Joseph Romano, was the only mourner to make the trip from Israel.

West German state and government officials were to join Munich Jews, Israeli diplomats and Mrs. Romano in a remembrance ceremony.

Two senior West German officials were to place wreaths next to a tiny metal plaque at an apartment building which served as part of the Olympic village. The plaque is the only tangible reminder of the attack and subsequent gunbattle in which 11 Israelis, five Arabs and a West German policeman lost their lives.

A band of Arab commandos stormed the flat last Sept. 5, killed two members of the Israeli Olympic team and took nine others hostage. That night the Arabs attempted to escape with their captives and a gunbattle broke out at the airport. It ended with 15 dead on the tarmac.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

The charge stemmed from an incident in the Century Inn beer parlor Aug. 15 when MacCormac struck barman Edgar Willsher of 820 Fisgard on the head three times with a cue stick.

The attack came after he was denied a beer because the pub had closed for the night. Willsher suffered cuts and bruises and was off work for a week, police said.

Police located the accused three days later in another beer parlor. Willsher identified MacCormac as the assailant in a police lineup Aug. 18.

Two 18-year-old mine workers, Robert J. Siemens and Mark S. MacMain, both of Logan Lake, B.C., were fined $100 and $75 respectively when they pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana.

The youths were charged after police stopped a car at Douglas and Hillside at 12:55 a.m. Monday. Prosecutor Peter Birkett said two ounces of marijuana were found on Siemen and half an ounce on MacMain.

MacMain also was charged with possession of two silver foil packages containing the drug MDA and was fined a further $100.

In other drug cases, Luc Brunette, 19, and Linda Silverthorn, 21, both of Port Alberni, were each fined $75 when they pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana. They were charged Aug. 25 at 11:15 p.m. after police observed them cross a downtown Victoria street smoking a cigarette which they passed back and forth.

Ray Juhasz, 2535 Avebury Ave., was fined $350 for impaired driving and $200 for refusing to take a breathalyzer test. He pleaded guilty.

Juhasz was charged early Tuesday after police had observed him drive along Bay Street without headlights on his car.

A man accused of shoplifting 17 cents worth of cheese and some ham from a Super-Valu store said he did it because he only received one meal a day at his hostel and he was "very hungry."

Daoust told Judge Ostler he did not have sufficient funds to buy the cheese and ham so hid them in his pant's pocket.

"No one in Canada should go hungry," the judge said, and advised the accused to seek help with local welfare agencies.

Office Block Step Nearer

A bylaw will be drawn up declaring the west side of Shelbourne between McKenzie and Garnet a development area, paving the way for construction of a five-storey commercial building, Saanich's highest.

Council Tuesday rejected a move to make the area general commercial (it is now zoned for detached houses) because it would have little control of the construction providing the developer, Aske Holdings Ltd., met the zoning requirements.

Municipal clerk Gordon Hayward told council the developer and municipal officials could now begin work on a land-use contract acceptable to Saanich and the developer.

A public hearing will be held.

The proposed building, to be named the Diderot Centre, will have a total square footage of 87,630 square feet.

The first floor will provide an outdoor covered mall and an innner one for small neighborhood retail and professional tenants.

The second floor will be designed for community use, such as a library, theatre and specialized offices. This floor will have a roof-top patio, covering 9,800 square feet, with facilities for relaxation.

The remaining three floors will be for medical and dental offices with some general office space.

Underground parking will be provided for 300 cars and additional surface parking for 80 cars will be located at the rear of the building.

SEVERSON

Edmonton Man Dies

SICAMOUS, B.C. (CP) — Harold John Hasebank, 20, of Edmonton was killed in a two-car accident near here. Three other persons were taken to hospital.

Strike Curbs Sought

Saanich will enlist province-wide support in a drive to take away powers of fire, police, nursing and other emergency services to strike.

The council will write Premier Dave Barrett, Attorney-General Alex Macdonald, Labor Minister William King and the executive of the Union of B.C. Municipalities, asking for amendment of the Mediation Commission Act, passed in 1968, which allows emergency services to strike.

The 33 municipalities with paid fire departments and the "dozen-odd" with paid police forces, also will be asked for support.

Ald. Fred Severson, who called for the action, said:

"Municipal councils and emergency services are caught in a bind. I certainly don't condone it (the Act). Its poor legislation.

★

"Many contracts are opening Nov. 1 and will be faced with the decision of do we allow them to strike or don't we? I don't think the present (provincial) government is prepared to move."

Severson, a member of the Victoria fire department and second vice-president of the B.C. Professional Fire Fighters Association, said the group wants the right to strike removed.

"We formerly (before the 1968 legislation) had compulsory arbitration," he said. "We won some, we lost some. But it was always fair."

Earlier Severson had urged council to support a resolution to be raised from the floor at the Prince George meeting of the UBCM.

Mayor Hugh Curtis said it was of too vital importance to be handled this way because the chances of the resolution being even considered were remote.

★

"It would be most regrettable," he said, "if the resolution got swept out with the confetti at the conference."

Severson said he realized he should have presented the resolution earlier but he was moved to take action now because of the recent ferry strike.

"I am sure my colleagues on council do not condone this type of action (the ferry strike)," he said, "particularly when we are told the strike was illegal."

He added:

"I suggest that if we continue to accept this Act without change and without voicing our disapproval, then we would be equally as guilty as any group that might utilize their right to strike and, therefore, leave the public without the life-saving protection that is rightfully theirs."

Village Now Overnight Mecca . . .

BOMBAY (CP) — A village 30 miles from here has overnight become a major attraction for religious-minded people.

Rain-swept Amboli is not only drawing Hindus and Christians from nearby areas but has become a focus of attention for the hundreds of Americans, Canadians, Britons and Frenchmen who have come to India in search of "spiritual harmony."

It all happened when Gangaram Pawar, an Amboli farmer, claimed that he was commanded by God Shiva to search for a holy idol in the local pond.

"God Shiva came to me in my dream and asked me to find the idol and instal it in a special temple," Pawar said.

The farmer immediately became the butt of ridicule. Children teased him when he walked through the streets of Amboli. For several days Pawar had to hide in his farm in order to escape the unwelcome public attention.

But he persisted in his belief that a Shiva idol lay embedded in the pond.

One evening an American visitor came to the village. Her name was Jane Silverman, a Californian who has been staying in a Hindu monastery in the Himalayan mountains for some years.

She claimed she also had a dream in which God Shiva commanded her to find the idol and build a temple for it.

The whole hamlet was electrified. The overjoyed Pawar organized a big team of divers and within 48 hours a magnificent Shiva idol was fished out the old pond.

"It's a dream come true," commented Bombay Free Press Journal. Several members of the Bombay municipal corporation have visited Amboli to worship the idol and to assure the local villagers of their readiness to campaign for funds to build the proposed temple.

Meanwhile, many Americans, Canadians and other foreigners have been going to Amboli to pray before the idol, now installed in a temporary shed. All these foreigners are converts to Hinduism like Miss Jane Silverman.

Deborah Hopkins, 32-year-old native of Vancouver, said she planned to return to Canada to collect donations from her countrymen.

Miss Hopkins said that she was doing odd jobs including teaching and typing in Canada and the U.S. "before I received spiritual vibrations from India."

But there is some opposition in Amboli to associating foreigners with the temple-building work.

"We don't want foreign money to build a Hindu shrine," said Tukaram Moray, a local resident.

"The opposition will disappear shortly," said Miss Hopkins. "We are all genuine Hindus."

THE GOOD STUDENTS REBELLING

BOMBAY (CP) — The city of Agra, home of the world-famous Taj Mahal, has become a chronic centre of student unrest.

The growing violence on the Agra University campus contrasts sharply with the calm and beauty which marks the marble mausoleum, a Moslem emperor's tribute to his beloved wife.

Apart from frequent clashes between the students and the university authorities, there has also been what one newspaper calls "a state of civil war among the students themselves."

The two sides in this "civil war" are the students of the engineering college and their counterparts in the technical college.

As a spokesman for the technical college students put it, "We want to go on with our studies, while the engineering college boys are interested only in creating trouble."

The charge is denied by the rival group which says it is fighting for the "democratization" of the educational system.

Among other things, the action committee of the engineering college wants students to have some say in the conduct of examinations and that no one should be barred from taking examinations on the ground of insufficient classroom attendance.

According to the university rules, only those with 85-percent attendance will be allowed to sit for their examinations.

The "bad boys", as the trouble-makers have come to be known in official circles, are also demanding that question papers should not be "too stiff."

Last November's terminal examinations have been postponed five times because of walkouts from examination halls. They are still to be held.

The "good boys" of the technical college and their supporters (said to be in a majority) want discipline maintained. They say that the "bad boys" are "holding the university to ransom."

The biggest crisis in the university came this summer when the "good boys" raided the engineering college hostel and allegedly beat up their rivals with cycle chains, iron rods and hockey sticks.

Police were called in to restore order. About 100 hostel dwellers have sought asylum in the university guest house.

According to the university authorities, it is the "bad boys" who started the latest round of violence by attacking the hostel warden and other officials, demanding a further postponement of the examinations and adequate time to prepare for them.

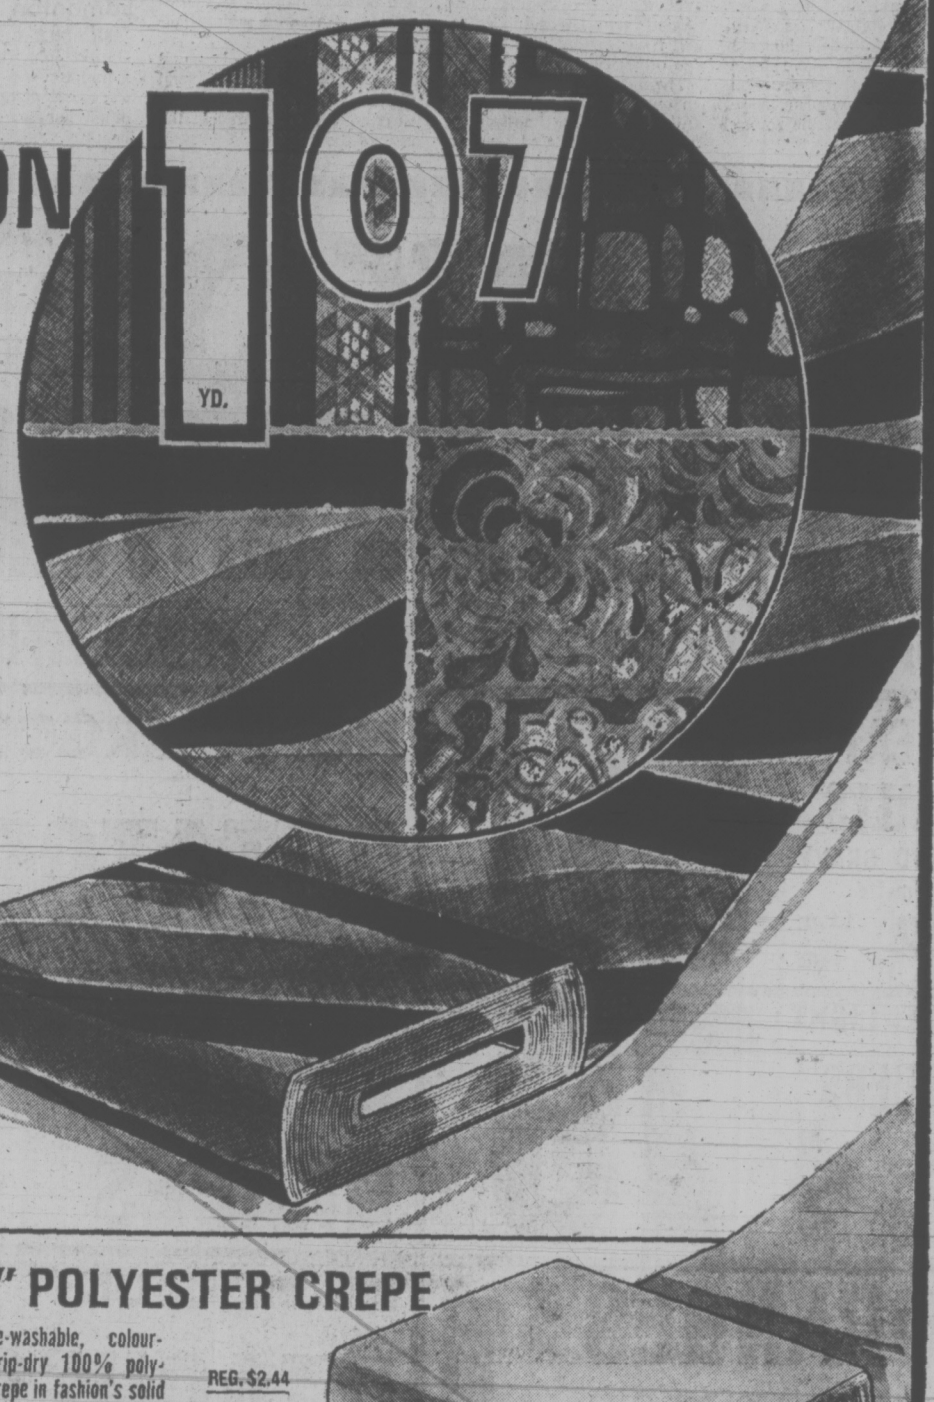

Now, the "good boys" are to start an agitation for holding examinations on schedule.

Population Size Hit

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal-provincial environmental study concludes that the native way of life in the James Bay region cannot support a larger population.

The conclusion, contained in a progress report on James Bay environmental research, is that the "large increase in the number of young adults in the next 10 years will result in out-migration if new jobs cannot be created in the North."

The report outlines scientific research on the impact of the James Bay hydroelectric project on Indians, Eskimos and wildlife in the region. An earlier report was made public in February, 1972.

The bill for environmental research will amount to about $10 million when all studies are completed, the report says. The work is being carried out by the federal environment department and the James Bay Development Corp., a provincial agency.

The 6,000 Cree Indians and Eskimos have asked Quebec Superior Court for an injunction to halt construction on the $6-million project which they say will cause irreparable damage to the environment and their way of life.

The report says that a study carried out by McGill University researchers recognized that the region is one of the last in North America where "native people have followed a way of life which is highly dependent on wildlife resources."

But, the wildlife resources could not support more people.

The study projected an increasing population, a rising level of education in the region and a "rather static mining and forestry industry in the absence of hydroelectric developments."

Wednesday Movies and Specials

Movies

PAUL SCOFIELD
... Tonight on 5 at 8:30

Hellfighters (xx), on 8 at 8. John Wayne, Jim Hutton and Katherine Ross star in this 1969 drama about Texans who battle oil fires for a living.

The Eddy Duchin Story (xxx), on 13 at 8. A sentimental 1956 account of pianist Eddy Duchin's early career and his two marriages — set in New York of the Thirties. A good cast with Tyrone Power, Kim Novak and Victoria Shaw.

Toma, on 4 at 8:30. A preview of a new fall series about a plainclothes detective who uses his special talent for disguises to crack a gambling ring. This series pilot is based on the exploits of a New Jersey policeman (who appears briefly as Det. Vinnie Cecca) and stars Tony Musante in the title role.

A Man for All Seasons (xxxx), on 5 at 8:30. A second chance (if you missed it over the weekend) to see this Oscar-winning 1966 historical drama. The film's essence is a clash of wills that rocked 16th-century England, when Sir Thomas More — Lord Chancellor and a devout Catholic — refused to condone the divorce or re-marriage of Henry VIII. A flawless east includes Paul Scofield, Wendy Hiller and Leo McKern.

The Plainsman (xxx), on 11 at 11. Gary Cooper and Jean Arthur portray Wild Bill Hickok and Calamity Jane in this 1937 Cecil B. DeMille western spectacle, loaded with story and action.

The Little Hut (xxx), on 7 and 12 at 11:30. A delightful 1957 comedy taken from the sophisticated French play about a wife, her husband and his best friend living a "civilized" existence while shipwrecked on an island. Excellent cast with David Niven, Ava Gardner and Stewart Granger.

Hec Ramsey (xxx), on 6 and 8 at midnight. Richard Boone plays a turn-of-the-century crime specialist in this 1972 movie that served as the pilot for the current TV series.

Brigham Young — Frontiersman (xxx), on 13 at midnight. An interesting 1940 drama that tells of the pioneer Mormans who journeyed from Illinois to Utah in search of religious freedom starring Tyrone Power, Dean Jagger and Linda Darnell.

Specials

Billy Graham, on 7 and 12 at 7. "The Coming Judgement" is Dr. Graham's topic in his final program from Atlanta. (60 Mins.)

The Unreasonable Man, on 9 at 8. A comedy satire about office bureaucracy performed by the Pitschel Players of San Francisco. The central character is Raph Banal, a clerk retiring after a lifetime of totally meaningless work. (60 Mins.)

Heifetz Concert, on 9 at 9. The Russian-born violinist is seen in this portrait as musician and teacher. Heifetz instructs college-age students in techniques of violin playing, and the virtuosity of those techniques is illustrated in performance. (60 Mins.)

Land of the Small, on 11 at 9. Through the use of macrophotography, viewers get a close-up look at the complex societies of insects in this nature documentary, narrated by Gregory Peck. (60 Mins.)

Early Thursday Movies

Stanley and Livingstone (xxx), on 4 at 9:30. A well-played 1939 drama that tells the story of a newsman's search through Africa for a missionary he believed to be alive. His search culminated in the now famous statement, "Dr. Livingstone, I presume." An excellent cast includes Spencer Tracy, Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Charles Coburn.

A Howling in the Woods (xx), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. A 1971 made-for-TV thriller about strange happenings in a troubled town starring Barbara Eden and Vera Miles.

Reprisal! (xx), on 13 at 1:30. A better-than-average 1956 western about a half-breed, passing as a white man who is accused of murder in 1980 Oklahoma starring Guy Madison and Felicia Farr.

The Longest Hundred Miles (xx), on 7 at 3. Doug McClure and Ricardo Montalban star in this 1966 Second World War drama about fugitives from a Japanese prison camp.

Riding High (xx), on 5 at 3:30. A 1943 musical about a burlesque queen who turns up at her father's silver mine when her show folds. A good cast (Dick Powell and Dorothy Lamour) saves this film from becoming a complete bore.

CBC Radio Highlights

Wednesday
Sept. 5

6:30 (FM) Organists in Recital — From Ottawa Payl Halley will play Plein Jeu Fugue, Trio, Basse de Trompette ou de Cromorne, Fond d'Orgue and Dialogue, from Pieces d'Orgue (Marchand); Trois Pieces from les Corps Glorieux (Messaen), and Piece Heroique by Cesar Franck

7:03 (FM) Themes and Variations — The Miracle is Marian Anderson is a documentary of the great American contralto, prepared especially for this series by Margaret Ireland, a former Canadian concert pianist and CBC music producer who is now living in New York City. Commentator: Dr. Timothy McGee.

8:03 (AM) Concern — World Council of Churches — On the 25th anniversary of the World Council of Churches, Concern explores the story of the Council and its present difficulties. Included are interviews with Dr. Philip Potter, the president of WCC; Reverend Allen Brash, director of the committee on refugee work; Albert Van den Heuvel, director of the information department; Dr. Baldwin Sjollema, head of the committee fighting racism; Dr. Floyd Honey, president of the Canadian Council of Churches; and Dr. Leonard A. Griffith.

9:00 (FM) Music of Today — Music from the 52nd concert of the Societe de Musique Contemporaine du Quebec will be presented. Included are Circuits II, by Serge Garant, played by the Ensemble of the Societe de Musique Contemporaine du Quebec, directed by the composer; Architectures Colorees by Jean-Pierre Guezec, performed by the same group; an Madrigal V by Bruce Mather, performed by the same artists, with the voices of Margo MacKinnon and Ann Golden. Host-commentator: Norma Beecroft.

10:03 (FM) Ideas — Ethical Limited of Knowing. This is an illustrated talk by Professor Lionel Rubinoff, who says: "Rather than face the prospect of failure, it is often easier to recreate the structure of reality so as to make it conform to our needs and expectations. One of the most effective ways of facilitating this flight from reality is through the use of our bodies."

10:30 (AM) Up at the Cottage — Featuring two of the continuing characters on Inside From the Outside (which returns October 3rd), Agnes and Walter. In the cast are Barbara Hamilton, Carl Banas, Judy Sinclair and David Hughes

11:03 (AM) The Bush and the Salon — "The Earl of Southesk" is a satirical look at a minor historical figure, James Carnegie, the sixth Earl of Southesk who journeyed through the Hudson's Bay Company's territories in 1859-60 recording his travels.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc, for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want.

Nations Eye Israel Boycott

ALGIERS (UPI) — Nearly 50 non-aligned heads of state met today to consider third world issues, including Arab calls for boycotting Israel and a joint charter for co-operation among liberation movements throughout the world.

The three-day summit conference starting today was the largest in the 12-year history of the movement of non-aligned nations.

Officials said the conference aimed to approve new political and economic action programs in the light of new relationships developing among the superpowers, the United States, the Soviet Union and China.

Presidents, kings, princes, prime ministers and special envoys from 75 nations in Asia, Africa, Latin America and Southern Europe accepted invitations to attend. Forty-five of them had arrived by late Tuesday.

They included Libya's Col. Moammer Khadafy, making his debut at a major international conference; Uganda ruler Gen. Idi Amin; President Anwar Sadat of Egypt; President Tito of Yugoslavia; Mrs. Indira Gandhi, Prime Minister of India, and Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia.

A 12-item agenda has been readied for the summit by two preparatory sessions held here over the past week by a 17-member steering committee and foreign ministers.

Tuesday, the foreign ministers issued a working paper for summit consideration in which Arab states called on the non-aligned countries to isolate Israel by a comprehensive boycott until it withdraws from occupied Arab territory. The paper recommended the action should be taken under chapter seven of the U.N. charter concerning sanctions.

Earlier Tuesday, Palestinian sources said African liberation movements, Palestinian guerrillas and the Puerto Rican Socialist Party had agreed to submit to the conference a joint charter for military and political cooperation.

Sources said under terms of the charter, African "freedom fighters" would join the ranks of Palestinians in operations against Israel, or Palestinian commandos would participate with African guerrillas in action against Portugal, Rhodesia or South Africa.

BOY HURT IN HEROIN SHOOTOUT

NEW YORK (UPI) — A 12-year-old boy was wounded Tuesday night in a shootout between undercover agents and two suspected heroin dealers.

The child was identified as Caesar Garcia. He was caught in crossfire and was hit by a shotgun blast in the thigh and upper forearm. The boy was in good condition at Jacobi Hospital.

The shootout happened at a dry cleaners when the undercover agents from the drug enforcement task force tried to arrest the owner and another suspect after arranging to buy a half kilo (1.1 pounds) of heroin, police said.

The owner, identified as Anthony Gonzalez, 34, allegedly pulled a gun and started shooting. The undercover agents and a backup officer outside fired and Gonzalez was hit twice in the chest.

Gonzalez was arrested and reported in serious condition at Jacobi Hospital.

Also arrested was the other suspect, Ramon Perez, 43.

Police said the arrests ended a four-month investigation in which heroin was to be bought for $35,000. It may have been the first major heroin arrest under a tough new state law that provides up to life imprisonment for possession of a pound of heroin with intent to sell.

Argentina Still in Grip Of Guerrilla Violence

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — More guerrilla and criminal violence hit Argentina Tuesday as police cracked a kidnap ring, killing one of its members, and guerrillas murdered a private detective accused of "repressing" workers in Buenos Aires.

More than 130 persons have been kidnapped in Argentina this year, including seven foreigners, and nine are still in captivity. Spokesmen for two American companies Tuesday denied reports they had been added to the long list of foreign victims of guerrilla kidnaps and threats.

A federal police trap left one kidnapper dead and five others captured moments after they collected $35,000 in ransom for 14-year-old Sandra Polano and released her unharmed in a Buenos Aires suburb.

Police said officers surrounded two cars carrying the abductors just after they collected the cash. One kidnapper was killed, another wounded and four others arrested in a prolonged shootout and foot chase.

Leftist guerrillas Tuesday claimed credit for the shooting death earlier in the day of Emilio Horacio Larrea, a private detective they said was involved in "repression" of workers in Buenos Aires factories.

A guerrilla communique said Larrea, an unsuccessful city council candidate in the March election, was shot in his office when he resisted guerrilla demands for "information."

Spokesmen for Pepsi Cola and Ducilo, a Dupont subsidiary here, denied reports that an Argentine employee of Pepsi was kidnapped and that Ducilo president James Kelly left the country after being threatened by guerrillas. A Ducilo spokesman said Kelly's trip was planned well in advance.

Foreign firms have developed a policy of denying kidnappings until all employees involved are considered safe. The Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. denied its president had been kidnapped until after he was freed on payment of a record $3 million ransom earlier this year.

BREAD MARCH BY MOTHERS

SANTIAGO (UPI) — Middle class women demanding "bread for our children" organized a mass march through Santiago today to call for the ouster of the troubled government of President Salvador Allende.

Organizers predicted thousands of women would take part in the march less than 24 hours after leftist workers staged a giant rally in the capital to mark the third anniversary of the hemisphere's first freely elected Marxist regime.

Stockholm Divers Hit New Find

By JOHN CHADWICK

STOCKHOLM (Reuter) — A team of amateur diver-archeologists here have discovered what they believe is the wreck of a treasure-ship lost for nearly four centuries after a famous Swedish victory.

The wreck is believed to be that of a barquentine bringing back gold and silver for Field Marshal Johan Baner, one of Sweden's military heroes in the 30 Years War.

If the team's theory is true, the find could rival that of the 17th-century sailing ship Vasa, lifted from the muddy waters of Stockholm harbor 12 years ago and now one of Sweden's top historical and tourist attractions.

Marshal Baner, born in 1596, was largely credited with the Swedish victories at Wittstock in 1636 and Chemnitz in 1639, when masses of booty fell into Swedish hands.

The ship carrying home the marshal's riches hit a reef and foundered in a channel just outside the Swedish capital.

The wreck, discovered by two men and a girl diver—Soeren Fridman, Urban Andersson and Catharina Ingelman Sundberg— is about 52 feet long, 15 feet across and square-sterned, generally reminiscent of the size and shape of 17th-century freighters.

Experts from Sweden's naval history museum will examine the wreck to try to make a positive identification.

The three archeologists had searched for three years in their spare time before locating the wreck at a depth of 33 feet.

A team of treasure seekers sought unsuccessfully for the wreck exactly two centuries ago. In old church records here, Pastor J. P. Wallensten describes how a company was set up in 1773 and started diving in search of the treasure the following year, watched by King Gustav III.

But the costly search was finally abandoned.

The latest search involved working systematically over the 48,000 square-yards area where the wreck was believed to lie.

The three young archeologists finally made their find, tipped over and partly buried in thick slime, early in August.

So far they have brought up several beams and have found what seems to be the remains of the ship's galley. But no gold or silver, as yet.

It would be no profit to them if they do find treasure, for all has to be handed over to the state. The three archeologists are more interested in finding out whether they have, in fact, located another historical relic to rival the Vasa.

Marshal Baner did not live long to mourn the loss of his treasure. He died in Germany, two years after the battle of Chemnitz.

N.Z. Studying Unification

By J. C. GRAHAM
CP Correspondent

AUCKLAND (CP) — New Zealand will not after all go the whole way in unifying the three services into a single defence force on Canadian lines. Defence Minister Arthur Faulkner has rejected the system after study of its effects.

There was at one time a belief that the new Labor government which took office last November would go further in unification than the National party government which preceded it.

National sent several highranking officers to study the Canadian system and took a number of steps toward unification—the three services now work much more closely together, with chiefs of staff operating in a single building, and many supply and administrative operations have been unified.

But Labor has decided not to go the whole distance. The National spokesman on defence, A. McCready, asked in Parliament whether Labor proposed to reform the services on Canadian lines as indicated by Faulkner in a newspaper interview immediately after taking office.

The minister said the reorganization already taken embodied many features of the Canadian system, but New Zealand would continue to retain three separate services.

Faulkner added: "I regard the New Zealand armed services as at present structured to be a very efficient organization and I do not propose any further changes."

He said the Canadian system might be suitable for Canada, but it seemed inappropriate for services of the size of New Zealand's.

One of the arguments previously advanced against unification on Canadian lines has been that New Zealand, in any conceivable active operations abroad would have to co-operate with larger allies, and none of the countries with which it at present co-operates on any scale in military pacts or exercises has adopted a unified system.

A Small Force With Big Ideas

PORT MOODY, B.C. (CP) — This small waterfront city east of Vancouver has one of British Columbia's smaller municipal police forces.

But the force makes up for its physical size in community relations, law enforcement and innovative methods of handling a wide range of problems.

Chief Len McCabe says he is proud of his force's modern equipment, such as car radio units that can be unlocked and carried as walkie-talkies when officers leave their vehicles.

He takes more pride, however, in Port Moody's crime rate, which is well below the national average, and in his policy of mixing enforcement with fair play and kindness.

On a recent weekend patrol shift, for example, Cpl. Roy Stevens and Reserve Officer Paul Adams cheerfully handled a range of assignments that, in a big city, would involve the efforts of a half-dozen special squads.

The evening began with a trip to Surrey, another Vancouver suburb, to pick up a warrant for a Port Moody man who appeared that day in Surrey court on an assault charge—and then was alleged to have committed another assault before returning home.

The shift ended with Cpl. Stevens and Officer Adams helping to put an impaired driving suspect through a breath analysis test. In between, their duties included chasing a speeding car along a winding road and issuing a roadside licence suspension to the driver, as well as arresting the assault suspect with no trouble although they had been warned to approach with caution.

The officers sorted out a wild party in a patch of bushland and arrested one highly-impaired youngster, caught a speeding motorcycle with defective lights and ruled the machine off the road for repairs, as well as helping to quell a group of battling party-crashers.

Chief McCabe's force consists of two corporals and nine constables, assisted by a reserve group of 14 who usually work two shifts apiece each week. The reserves are intensively trained and two have become regular officers.

Most members of the force, including its chief, live in or near Port Moody and are active in community and sports activities—especially those involving young persons.

Joy Greets Peking's Young Heir

By JOHN BURNS
Special to the Times

PEKING — The elevation of Wang Hung-wen, a former Shanghai textile worker in his 30s, to the topmost rank of the Chinese leadership has been confirmed by publication of the membership of the new politburo, supreme organ of the Communist party.

Wang, the youngest man to reach such status since the party came to power, is one of nine new politburo members appointed to fill vacancies opened by purge, incapacity and death during the four-year life of the old body.

Other newcomers include a peasant hero, a woman who won national fame as a model worker during the cultural revolution, a veteran of the Long March, and a member of the Uighur minority that inhabits the West China province of Sinkiang.

The meteroic rise of Wang, however, tended to obscure the tight grip that the older generation of revolutionaries continues to have on the party.

Although the political realities appear to have been little changed by the new list, it seems clear that the party selected the newcomers with a view to persuading important constituent groups — youth, women, workers and peasants — that their interests are fairly represented at the pinnacle of political power.

Another tentative conclusion among observers here is that the new lineup, while a careful balance of the various elements within the leadership, presents no threat to the continuation of the pragmatic foreign and domestic policies China has pursued in recent years.

These policies were sanctioned by the surviving members of the old politburo, all of whom carry over to the new body, and there is nothing in what is known of the newcomers to suggest that they will argue for any radical departures.

However, an edition of the party paper, the Peoples Daily, with blanket coverage of the congress, lent support to the expectation that Wang will emerge as number three, behind Mao and Chou.

Confirmation of this must now await the first public showing of the leadership, which is careful always to appear in exact order of precedence.

The newspaper, though, gave prominence to a large photograph of Mao flanked on either side by Wang and Chou, and accompanied this with a wider shot of the rostrum showing all other members of the leadership arrayed in what appeared to be descending order of precedence to either side. In the past, such photographs have been an almost certain guide to the rankings.

It was that feature of the paper that seemed to hold everybody's attention. Wang, hitherto, had been little more than a name to most except to party cadres.

It seemed to be a cuse of genuine delight, especially among the young, that a representative of the younger generation could make it into the highest echelons of the party.

One of the first questions readers at the newsstands put to each other was Wang's exact age. It was a question that was vexing correspondents and diplomats, too, for there seemed to be no definitive source on the subject except Wang himself, who was of course unavailable.

But Chinese who have seen him say that he looks closer to 37, and Wang himself is reported on the not unimpeachable authority of a U.S. radical student group to have said that he is 34.

Whatever his exact age, he is certainly extraordinarily young for the position he has now attained.

Moreover, he has the good fortune — significant for any politician, even in China — to be tall and very good looking.

Diplomats who have talked with him report that he appears to have a first-class mind, and to have a straightforward and practical approach to matters that come under his authority.

He is said to be rather serious and forceful, but not aggressive, in conversation. As far as is known, he speaks no foreign language.

"He's an exceptional man, and would be in any country," said one envoy who has met him.

It is a measure of the break with tradition that Wang's advancement represents, that in normal times commentators would have pointed to another standing committee member about 20 years older than he is as an example of how the party is moving to make room at the top for younger people.

The other youngster, in relative terms at any rate, is Li Teh Sheng, the beetle-browed, thickset chief political commissar of the army, and its acting chief of staff.

A teen-age company commander on the Long March, he is in his middle 50s and was widely considered to be one of the men to reckon with in China's future, even before his appointment to the inner circle.

The other three members of the inner group are all holdovers from the old politburo — Yeh Chien Ying, the acting defence minister; Chang Chun Chiao, the Shanghai party boss; and Kang Sheng, a stalwart of the state security apparatus who has been in ill health for some time.

BURNED WOOD MIGHT BE HOME SHELL

SONORA, Calif. (AP) — The house you live in maybe built from trees that once burned in a forest fire.

Logging crews are hauling out scorched lumber from forests throughout California and other western states, where the worst fires in 20 years have ravaged nearly 200,000 acres of trees and brush.

Lumber company spokesmen say as much as 90 per cent of the wood from trees killed in these fires is useable as commercial lumber if loggers can get it out of the forests before it becomes infested with insects.

"Ninety per cent of the time a fire will burn the bark and kill the tree, but the fire's burning so fast it doesn't stay in one spot long enough to destroy the wood," said Mark Bevan, chief forester for Fiberboard Corp., a San Francisco-based firm.

"The bark may be charcoal and the branches all burned off, but inside the trunk the wood can be good as on a live tree," he said.

Logging in a burned forest is much the same as in a normal one, Bevan said, except the charred wood covers the men with grime and wears out their saws faster.

"The real loss is in young growing trees that were our future," Bevan said.

It takes five years to replant a 5,000 acre area in northern California because "we can only do it for a one-month period between the time the snow melts and the last rain falls," Bevan said.

"And it will be 80 to 100 years before the forest looks the way it did before the fire."

Trains Moving In Slow Motion

Times News Servi es

A New Westminster meeting of the joint council of railway workers voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to continue their defiance of the back-to-work legislation, thus preventing the resumption of normal rail traffic in British Columbia.

Besides the 1,000 workers at New Westminster, about 6,000 other rail workers in British Columbia remained off the job Tuesday, crippling all but isolated rail movements.

Similar pockets of resistance developed at Capreol, Thunder Bay, and Fort Erie, Ont., Winnipeg and Calgary. The Capreol protestors have formed their own association to press for increased wage demands.

A Canadian National Railways crew was despatched to Youbou this morning to switch 12 loads of lumber from the B.C. Forest Product mill.

The Youbou crew and the CN's yard engine crew at Point Ellice were the only rail transport in operation on Vancouver Island.

A CN official said the Point Ellice operation was experiencing difficulties servicing local industry because of lack of equipment.

"There's nothing coming over from the mainland," he said.

Nothing was moving on the Vancouver Island tracks of the Canadian Pacific Railways and the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway.

However, in Nanaimo, Jack Mason, chairman of the Vancouver Island local of the United Transportation Union, said today a meeting Tuesday night voted almost unanimously to return to work this afternoon.

Mason said it's a "reluctant" return to work and "we're still totally dissatisfied with the settlement."

The union represents workers employed by the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway, which is owned by CP Rail.

The CP's Carrier Princess, however, was back on her normal runs between Nanaimo, Vancouver and Swartz Bay, carrying trucks and foot passengers.

The CP's Princess Vancouver was also hauling freight and passengers on her three round trips between Nanaimo and Vancouver.

Meanwhile two Canadian National Railways freight trains arrived in Vancouver today from Boston Bar, 150 miles east, but a CN spokes-

Showdown Looms On Illegal Fishing

The federal fisheries department today adopted a hard line with Indian demonstrators now fishing with an illegal weir on the Cowichan River, bringing the possibility of a confrontation nearer.

Maurice Houghton, director of the department's conservation and protection branch, said from Vancouver there will be a meeting "shortly," possibly today, with representatives of the Cowichan band.

They will be advised the weir the demonstrators are using is illegal and will have to be removed, he said.

The band council had earlier disassociated itself from the demonstration and this is still the council's position, band manager Betty Chown said from Duncan today.

About 30 young Indians, many of them not from the Cowichan band, have been camped about a mile above the river mouth for over a week. To protest restrictions on their river fishing, they have installed a weir, a stake and branches fence across the river which forces spawning salmon into a trap.

The statement from Houghton is the second indication the department is adopting a get-tough stance. Tuesday night Environment Minister Jack Davis said he would not negotiate with anyone who is breaking the law.

Davis had been invited by the demonstrators to come to the weir site Thursday where a submission, detailing their grievances, was to be handed to him.

Gordon Elliott, spokesman for the protesters, said the submission would be given to reporters, whether Davis showed up or not.

Earlier he had said most of the Indians in the band who traditionally fish the river with special permits are not able to spear enough salmon to adequately feed their families. They want to revert to the old-time weir, while ensuring sufficient fish escape to produce future runs.

The protesters want Ottawa to finance a study on the feasibility of establishing a hatchery on the Cowichan.

Last week he said the demonstrators included Indians from Nass River, Bella Bella, Bella Coola, Cache Creek, Lillooet on the mainland as well as Westholme, 10 miles north of Duncan.

Houghton said today there is "some indication" there may also be Indian militants from the U.S.

GUERRILLAS SEIZE EMBASSY

PARIS (UPI) — Three armed Palestinian guerrillas seized the Saudi Arabian embassy and an undetermined number of hostages today, threatening to blow up the building unless they were granted free passage out of France.

The guerrillas also said they were demanding the release of a leading Palestinian guerrilla serving a life sentence in Jordan.

The guerrillas initially gave police a 5 p.m. (noon EDT) deadline to provide them a car to the airport and a plane out of France, but extended the deadline twice.

Hundreds of police wearing helmets and bullet-proof vests and including a team of sharpshooters surrounded the Greystone building in the swank 16th district not far from the Arc De Triomph.

Arabs Cool On Oil

Times News Services

Ministers from major Arab oil-producing countries met in Kuwait Tuesday, but an Egyptian official said there was no discussion of cutbacks in oil production as a possible weapon against the United States.

In Washington, U.S. State department oil specialists assessed the shifting petroleum situation in the Middle East.

The department spokesman said the United States regrets Libya's action in seizing a 51-per-cent interest in five major Western oil companies.

In Kuwait, there had been reports that the ministers considered using their oil production to influence what they consider Washington's pro-Israeli policy in the Middle East dispute.

An Egyptian delegate to the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries (OAPEC), also said the ministers planned to raise the possibility of renegotiating oil price agreements at an emergency meeting in Vienna with the major oil exporters and customers.

"Some of the ministers are leaving here directly for Vienna," the delegate said. "The Tehran price agreement comes strictly within the sphere of the organization of petroleum exporting countries."

The minister's meeting Tuesday declared support for Libya in nationalizing 51 per cent of the foreign oil firms in the country on Saturday.

Oil Firms Angered By Freeze

Times News Services

The oil industry has reacted with anger to federal proposals for a price freeze on petroleum products.

Spokesmen called Prime Minister Trudeau's announcement Tuesday a political move which will, in the long run, be a disservice.

They said it could reduce exploration for oil, thereby reducing reserves, deplete future provincial government revenue and possibly create further conflicts between the provincies and the federal government.

Most spokesmen interpreted the prime minister's statement as a request for the petroleum industry to hold prices until Jan. 30 on a voluntary basis.

However, no one was saying whether they would follow Trudeau's request.

"The independent oil producers are very disturbed by the thought of price controls," said G. W. Cameron, manager of the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada.

"I believe the proposed freeze on crude and petroleum products is solely for political reasons. During the last 15 years, crude price increases have done little more than keep even with inflation."

An increase of 40 cents a barrel for Western Canadian crude oil went into effect on Aug. 1, and some companies said they still had not caught up with the increased costs of their supplies.

Premier Barrett said in Kelowna the voluntary controls are a timid move.

Barrett said the oil companies have not been known for their willingness to co-operate with anyone.

If the federal government found it necessary to bring in legislation to end the national railway strike, it should use legislation to control petroleum prices, he said.

"B.C. will continue to watch the situation very closely", he said in a reference to the powers which exist under the B.C. Energy Act. This act was brought in last spring, but a section providing for price controls in the petroleum industry was not proclaimed into law.

Since Jan. 1, gasoline prices have been increased five cents a gallon in Ontario, four cents east of the Ottawa Valley where imported supplies are used, and 3.6 cents in Western provinces.

Hans Maciej, manager of the Canadian Petroleum Asso-

NO BUDGET

OTTAWA (CP) — The government at present has no intention of introducing any type of budget, Finance Minister John Turner told the Commons Tuesday.

He was replying to Opposition Leader Stanfield, who asked if the government intended to eliminate its sales tax on building materials and children's clothes in a new budget.

Grits Meet NDP Price

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau reckons he's proposed enough to deal with inflation for now and stay in power a little longer.

As James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) unkindly observed in the House Tuesday, the prime minister had just given the New Democrats about half of what they demanded as the price of their continued support for the minority government.

—Pensions under the old age security and guaranteed income supplement plans will be escalated every three months, beginning Oct. 1, instead of every year, to reflect increases in the cost of living;

—The two per cent ceiling on the annual cost-of-living escalation of pensions paid under the Canada Pension Plan and under plans for retired federal government employees will be removed, the CPP change depending on the approval of the provinces;

—Not waiting for the scheduled Jan. 1 raise in family allowances to an average of $20 per month, taxable, the government will make an interim increase to $12 a month, non-taxable, beginning in October;

—The current $1 per bushel subsidy for wheat will be increased to $1.25 per bushel consumed by Canadians as a "consumer subsidy," but with the maximum as well as the minimum price to farmers being fixed—a measure designed to keep the price of bread from continuing to rise;

—A five cents-per-quart subsidy will be paid on milk in provinces where marketing boards agree to hold or reduce the price of milk for at least one year; and

—The oil industry will be asked to refrain from further price increases to Canadian

KINGSVIEW ACCEPTS

NORTH COWICHAN — George Treit, director of development for Kingsview Properties Ltd., has sent North Cowichan council a letter of acceptance of amended land-use contract demands for a large housing subdivision here.

These give North Cowichan a measure of control never before instituted by a Vancouver Island community, he said.

$1 Million Award

EAST HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A state referee has ordered three labor unions to pay the United Aircraft Corp. more than $1 million in damages stemming from a 1960 strike at the corporation's Pratt and Whitney and Hamilton Standard divisions. The award was part of the corporation's $8,453,869 loss during the job action which included "the involuntary absence of employes because of fear and coercion" ruled the referee.

Pound Plummets

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's pound took a beating today and pulled the U.S. dollar down with it on most European money markets. The price of gold rose. The Frankfurt exchange fixed the dollar at 2.4385, its lowest price for two weeks. Gold jumped more than $2 an ounce. By mid-day it cost only $2.4180 to buy a pound, compared with $2.4415 Tuesday night.

Drug Roundup Nets 20

A major round-up of drug traffickers, mainly in heroin, on Vancouver Island resulted in the arrest of at least 20 people Tuesday night and police are searching for another 17, an RCMP spokesman said today.

The arrests are the result of more than three months of work by two RCMP undercover narcotics agents.

Warrants for the arrests of 37 persons were issued Tuesday and police are seeking suspects in Victoria, Port Alberni, Nanaimo, Courtenay and Campbell River.

Of the warrants issued, 21 involve trafficking in heroin and 16 involve "other drug-related offences," the spokesman said.

Five people appeared in Victoria provincial court today charged with trafficking in heroin and another person was charged with trafficking in LSD.

Joseph Pagnotta, 21, of 1028 Princess, and Micheline Francoeur, 19, of no fixed address, were charged jointly and were remanded in custody until Friday for election of trial method. The two are charged with trafficking in heroin on July 21.

Manning MacKeigan, 22, of no fixed address, was charged with trafficking July 31 in Victoria. He will also appear in court again Friday.

Hefty Terms For Heroin

Robert Langer, 30, convicted July 16 on a charge of conspiracy to traffic in heroin, today was sentenced to a total of 20 years by Victoria county court Judge M. L. Drake. Co-conspirator Michael Kineses, 27, was sentenced to 15 years.

Kinoses and Langer were charged Oct. 26 with conspiracy to traffic heroin and possession of heroin for the purposes of trafficking. Also charged at the time were Daniel Hadden, 57, Sharon Dannenberg, 29, and Wendy Dance, 25.

Dannenberg was sentenced to seven years July 20 on the possession charge and the conspiracy charge stayed by the crown.

Hadden was sentenced to five years for conspiracy and acquitted on the possession count. Dance was acquitted on both charges.

Prosecutor Cecil Bramson told the court that Hadden and Langer were convicted in 1969 of conspiring together to utter forged documents.

"If there is ever a case of two men who haven't learned their lesson, this surely must be the one," said Bramson.

He said Kinseses was "a person apparently aware of the extreme dangers of this venomous substance."

JURY INDICTS EHRLICHMAN

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A grand jury indicted former presidential aide John Ehrlichman and three members of the White House "plumbers" unit Tuesday in connection with the burglary of the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist, it was reported today.

The grand jury, which returned secret indictments Tuesday, was reported to have charged Ehrlichman with perjury and conspiracy to commit burglary for his alleged role in the September, 1971, break-in of the Los Angeles offices of Dr. Henry Fielding.

Convicted Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy and former White House aides David Young and Egil "Bud" Krogh were said to have been charged with conspiracy to commit burglary.

The identity of those indicted and the charges against them were reported by at least two newspapers — The Los Angeles Times and The Washington Post.

Italian 'Way of Life' Deadly

ROME (UPI) — Not enough syringes.

Doctors reporting cholera cases hours late.

Raw sewage flowing into the sea . . .

Italy's cholera outbreak has dramatically exposed some of the shortcomings Italians used to shrug off as part of this country's way of life. Nineteen deaths in eight days have shocked people into awareness that sloppiness can be dangerous.

Health officials have reported 159 confirmed cholera cases since the disease was first detected in Naples August 28. Scores more of suspected cases are under observation.

"Unless we stamp out the disease within three months, there is a danger cholera may become endemic, as in some parts of the Middle East," a provincial health officer said in Milan. The city so far has had only one case but receives a steady flow of immigrants from cholera-infested southern Italy.

Health Minister Luigi Gui said during a visit in Bari, one of the main centres of the outbreak, the spread of the disease had been contained and the condition of patients was "generally satisfactory."

But with the tales of efficiency come stories of sloppiness and disorganization.

In the opening days of the outbreak, health officials in Naples could not find enough syringes to administer vaccine. In Torre Del Greco, one of the worst hit communities, the outbreak found six of the town's 13 pharmacies closed for summer vacations. A health ministry expert in Rome said the government had been notified of the outbreak five days late.

The city's century-old sewer system, which dumps raw sewage straight into the sea, was accused as one of the main culprits in the outbreak.

"For 13 years, despite our efforts, no new streetcleaners have been hired and more than half of Naples' streetcleaners are more than 55 years old," Cerciello said.

Rome health authorities blamed the spread of the disease on polluted mussels and other shellfish. The government has banned the sale and consumption of mollusks all over Italy.

Dad's Role in a Birth —A Case for Activism

Never let it be said that I've an entirely closed mind, especially if it means the alienation of a whole bunch of readers. Which is what happened as the result of the true confession here last week that I'd rather be somewhere, anywhere, else than in the delivery room with a lady having a baby, especially if the lady happens to be my wife.

Well, sir, my office phone hardly stopped ringing for two days, almost all of the callers being young married women who believe that a husband's presence at a blessed event is a duty, an act of love and a genuine support.

True, most older women who've had a child without Old Dad's immediate attendance are in agreement with me — "I'd be in the nearest bar, myself, if it were the other way around," one confided — but clearly there's another side to be heard.

It's put rather well, I'd say, by Jonathan Franklin, our news editor, who, as I mentioned, was at the side of his wife, Haleen, when she produced a darlin' daughter last week.

"I remember when our first child was born two years ago," he says in a note to me. "In the next delivery room a woman was screaming with all the agony of the wrack. I looked in and she was writhing around on the delivery table, streaming sweat, face contorted and body knotted. She was causing herself so much physical and mental pain it was hard to believe. Needless to say, her husband was not there. In our delivery room there was silence except for the breathing routine we both had learned. No shrieks, just quiet talk between contractions.

"This was the burial of the myth, Jack" Jonathan goes on. "Even in this modern age a birth is natural. In so-called primitive countries it strikes no terror in either mother or father. And it takes no bravery for a man to be in the delivery room, just a bit of training so he'll know what to expect.

"Of course a man can't be part of a birth in the same way as his wife. After all, it's her body and she is experiencing some intense feelings which can at times be almost overwhelming. But the man is a familiar face, albeit masked and gowned, in strange surroundings. If it is a first birth it's a trip into the unknown. The woman may like a hand to hold. Would you send your three-year-old to kindergarten alone on his first day?

"Towards the end," Jonathan concludes, "the contractions are really hard work. No pain, Jack, but she will be sweating, thirsty. You can mop her face or give her a sip of water. You can hold up her head and shoulders to help her push, and finally see the baby's head born. If you feel that the woman is undergoing a dreadful ordeal that is even more of a reason to be with her to help her through. You don't get married or make love in separate rooms so why run out when the baby's due? It is, after all, a family affair."

This is the point made, too, by Arthur and Libby Colman in their book, "Pregnancy — The Psychological Experience" which has been recommended to me. The Colmans believe in the delivery room presence of the husband because "it seems appropriate that the pregnancy experience should end as it began, in an intimate, shared moment between a man and a woman creating a new life."

In their chapter on "The Expectant Father's Experience," the Colmans make the point that so many of my callers made and we will close the subject with their words:

"For almost all observers, childbirth is awe-inspiring. Obstetricians who have viewed thousands of births still thrill at the wonder of the beautifully formed creature slipping out of its warm, watery world into the light and air. For the husband watching his own baby emerging from between the legs of his own wife, the emotional impact is unbelievable. Everybody else in the room is busy, but the husband can give himself up totally to the moment. His superfluity is at last a great advantage. He must grasp this moment, gulp it all, for he will carry it with him for the rest of his life.

"It is rare for a man to return to a non-participatory role once he has experienced such direct involvement. At the very least, he has been given ways to cope constructively with the inevitable intense feelings associated with childbirth. For men used to an active mode of living, it is extremely gratifying to have an alternative to the impotent waiting imposed by the hospital system. The husband's role is still secondary to his wife's and the obstetricians' but when he helps with controlled breathing or rubs his wife's tight muscles between contractions, a man is avoiding isolation and inaction for his wife as well as for himself.

City Stifles Conversions

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

There'll be no moratorium in Victoria on converting apartments to condominiums, city council agreed Tuesday, but rather a "statement of intent" to guide the business community.

And that statement says, in effect: Nothing doing — at least until the present shortage of apartment accommodation is drastically improved.

The actual wording of the resolution, moved by Ald. Mike Young at the informal and unanimously supported, reads: "In view of the shortage of rental accommodation and the low vacancy rate for such accommodation, Victoria city council will not be favorably disposed toward the conversion of rental multiple accommodation to condominiums."

Apart from enunciating that policy, which will be confirmed at next week's regular council meeting, aldermen also backed a suggestion by Mayor Peter Pollen that the planning and engineering departments be asked to draft special design and construction standards for proposed new condominium buildings.

But that proposal drew strong opposition from Ald. Sam Bawlf, who said it would create strong pressure on the already inadequate stock of apartment accommodation.

"If you create special standards which raise the cost to the developer he is obviously going to opt for converting," he said. To which Pollen replied the only real form of protection lay in a moratorium on such conversions.

Bawlf also argued that giving special consideration to people who buy condominiums amounts to an indirect type of discrimination against people in rental accommodation who are not protected by similar standards.

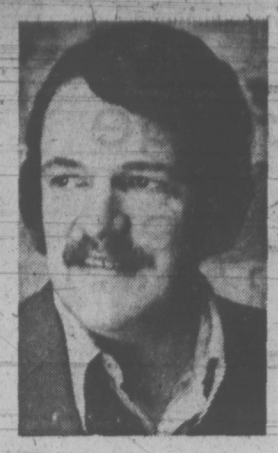

There should be an across-the-board establishment of standards as the "lowest common denominator" for all types of construction, he said.

But other council members and especially the mayor disagreed, pointing out that there are basic differences between the two types of accommodation.

Describing them as "poles apart," Pollen said people buying condominium accommodation of ten face shocks in the shape of high tax bills, lack of proper sound insulation, nuisance from neighboring pets and children and the difficulty of reselling.

Such people cannot, like ordinary renters, "exercise their wholesome discretion" by moving out of that situation, he said.

"There isn't one condominium newspaper ad. that says 'No children or pets allowed,' because they can't say it," he added.

UNSIGHTLY BLACKTOP on Victoria's parking lots should be screened by shrubbery, says the city bylaw, but one citizen apparently objects to the planters intruding on to the sidewalk. At a parking lot on Meares, between Cook and Vancouver, someone Tuesday pushed over the offending object and scrawled indignantly in chalk: "Sidewalks are for people."

SECOND SECTION

Pollen Sets Sails For Fall Race To City's Helm

Dispelling all doubt and speculation, Mayor Peter Pollen announced today he will seek voter support for a second two-year term in the Nov. 17 civic election.

"How could I not run again?" Pollen said at his weekly City Hall press conference.

And although he could think of "a million and one things I could do with my time," he could not envisage withdrawing from the city scene when so many major tasks affecting the future of James Bay, Victoria West, the waterfront and the downtown area remain half-completed.

The only qualification Pollen tossed in with his statement was the admission he would not run for mayor if the candidates included someone of the calibre of Ald. Mike Young (chairman of council's zoning committee).

But that didn't mean he was trying to "ordain" Young as his successor, he stressed. Young was one of three or four members of city council who would make an excellent mayor of the city or MLA, he added.

To date the only possible candidate for the Victoria mayoralty to emerge is Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, and he has merely said he is keeping his options open in that respect.

Pollen confessed he is "quite concerned" at this dearth of candidates, both for the mayoralty and aldermanic seats.

INFLATION BOOSTED AS RECREATION AID

A city alderman suggested Tuesday the time has come to think seriously about the benefits of one kind of inflation.

Ald. Sam Bawlf told city council's Group B committee Victoria should study the possibility of building inexpensive recreational facilities by means of inflatable structures.

This type of construction is widely favored in European countries, particularly Sweden, Bawlf said. It enables such facilities as sports arenas and swimming pools to be provided at a building cost of about $3 per square foot, compared with $20 for conventional structures.

To illustrate the cost benefits, Bawlf said a community facility in Delta, including a complete ice sheet, icing equipment, change rooms and seating for 800, is being built for only $150,000.

"I believe it's time we caught up with this technology," he said.

Curtis Roasts Arts Promoter

Arts promoter Jeremy Boultbee drew fire from Mayor Hugh Curtis Tuesday after he accused Saanich council's finance committee of stifling the arts.

Boultbee was appearing before council after the finance committee had rejected his application for a business licence to hold an arts fair and establish a refreshment concession at Mattick's Farm on Cordova Bay Road. Council eventually tabled the request.

Boultbee had also asked permission to hold open air concerts for "between 400 and 500 people" at the farm in order to help finance the arts fair.

He reminded Curits that the mayor had said "arts must be encouraged" when he officiated at an art gallery opening July 17. He reminded aldermen they had refused to pay the municipality's share of $4,100 sought by Open Space on Fort Street through the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee.

... raises ire

Boultbee, stating that he expected his submission to be rejected, added he had "been very summarily dismissed" by the finance committee.

Curtis said:

"Let's put that behind us and zero in on what you have in mind." "You came to council prepared to run into bureaucracy and squares . . . you brought it on yourself."

Curtis told Boultbee he had left the committee meeting "in a state of extreme annoyance."

Boultbee raised Ald. Leslie Passmore's ire when he said Passmore had reported he had visited Open Space and decided it "was not his cup of tea."

Passmore said this was incorrect:

"I said not all the exhibits at Open Space were my cup of tea," he told Boultbee. "The photography was pretty good. I'm a square. It appeared to me the paintings were a couple of people in the process of copulation! That's not my cup of tea."

Ald. William Noel said, "I think he (Boultbee) did have some reason to be annoyed. He made an application for a permit and was rejected with no reasons given."

Noel said the fire department had said the farm buildings did not meet the standards and washroom facilities were inadequate.

Ald. Alan Newberry said, "We're dealing only with an arts and crafts fair. I think it's indeed a welcome attraction—it's a good site for it."

Municipal solicitor Doug Patterson said the zoning laws did not allow open air concerts in the area.

"Victoria has more potential as an artists' colony than any other city in North America," Boultbee said. "To deliberately block these people when they exist in large numbers is definitely not forward-looking."

He said artists couldn't work in the "antiseptic silence" of such places as Nootka Court and Bastion Square, because "they get their hands dirty."

Camosun Eyes Seven Sites

Seven possible sites for Camosun College's downtown campus will be viewed and considered by college administrators in the next few days, principal Dr. Grant Fisher said today.

The campus will be within a three-block radius of the entrance to Bastion Square and must be easily visible from a main pedestrian thoroughfare, Fisher said.

"We're still hoping for a Jan. 1 opening" for the new campus, he said.

Community services courses for the general public and possibly an assessment program for people re-entering the education system after many years' absence will be offered in the new campus.

The site will be 3,000 square feet, plus a possible extra 2,000 square feet which would be used for a classroom-laboratory for a dental assistant program, said Fisher.

Several possible sites will be selected this fall by Camosun College Council and submitted to the department of education for approval before a three-year lease is signed on one site, he said.

Union Centre Addition Delayed

Expansion of the Union Centre on Quadra has been postponed because construction bids were higher than anticipated, building co-op president Jim McAvoy said Tuesday.

The centre, owned by a co-operative of unions, was to have been extended over the Quadra Street parking lot to provide extra offices and $200,000 had been budgeted.

But bids ranged from $234,900 to $277,388 and McAvoy said the cost of financing would not have been covered by the anticipated revenue.

The idea of expanding has not been dropped but has been tabled until a better economic picture can be seen, McAvoy said.

TRIO OF HIKERS BELIEVED SAFER

An experienced hiker said the fatal accident on the West Coast Trail Saturday may not have happened if the party had been composed of three persons instead of two.

Dennis Maxwell was referring to the drowning of Donald A. Matheson of London, Ont., who slipped off a rocky ledge into the sea.

"If the party had been composed of three persons equipped with rope, there would have been no problem," he said. "People should travel in threes if they plan to traverse hazardous areas. They should also be properly equipped to deal with an emergency."

He said he hoped the accident would not lead to the elimination of all the challenging aspects of the trail.

"The trail near Port Renfrew is challenging and interesting," he said. "I would hate to see this aspect of the trail disappear."

Trail Priority May Change

The federal parks department will take another look at priorities on its West Coast Trail improvement program following the drowning Saturday of Donald Arthur Matheson, of London, Ont.

Reg Joscelyn, operation manager for Pacific Rim National Park at Long Beach, said Tuesday a survey of the accident scene will be made this week.

The Logan Creek section of the trail is about 15 miles from Port Renfrew and is reported in poor condition. The 23-year-old hiker slipped on rocks near Logan Creek and fell into the sea.

Outdoorsmen said the federal parks department should have started improving the trail in the Port Renfrew area instead of first repairing the Pachena section, about 15 miles from Bamfield.

Joscelyn said he was aware that the trail is in poor condition at Logan Creek.

"We started to work from the Pachena end because more people use this section of the trail," he explained. "Many hikers walk from Pachena to Tusiat Falls and then return."

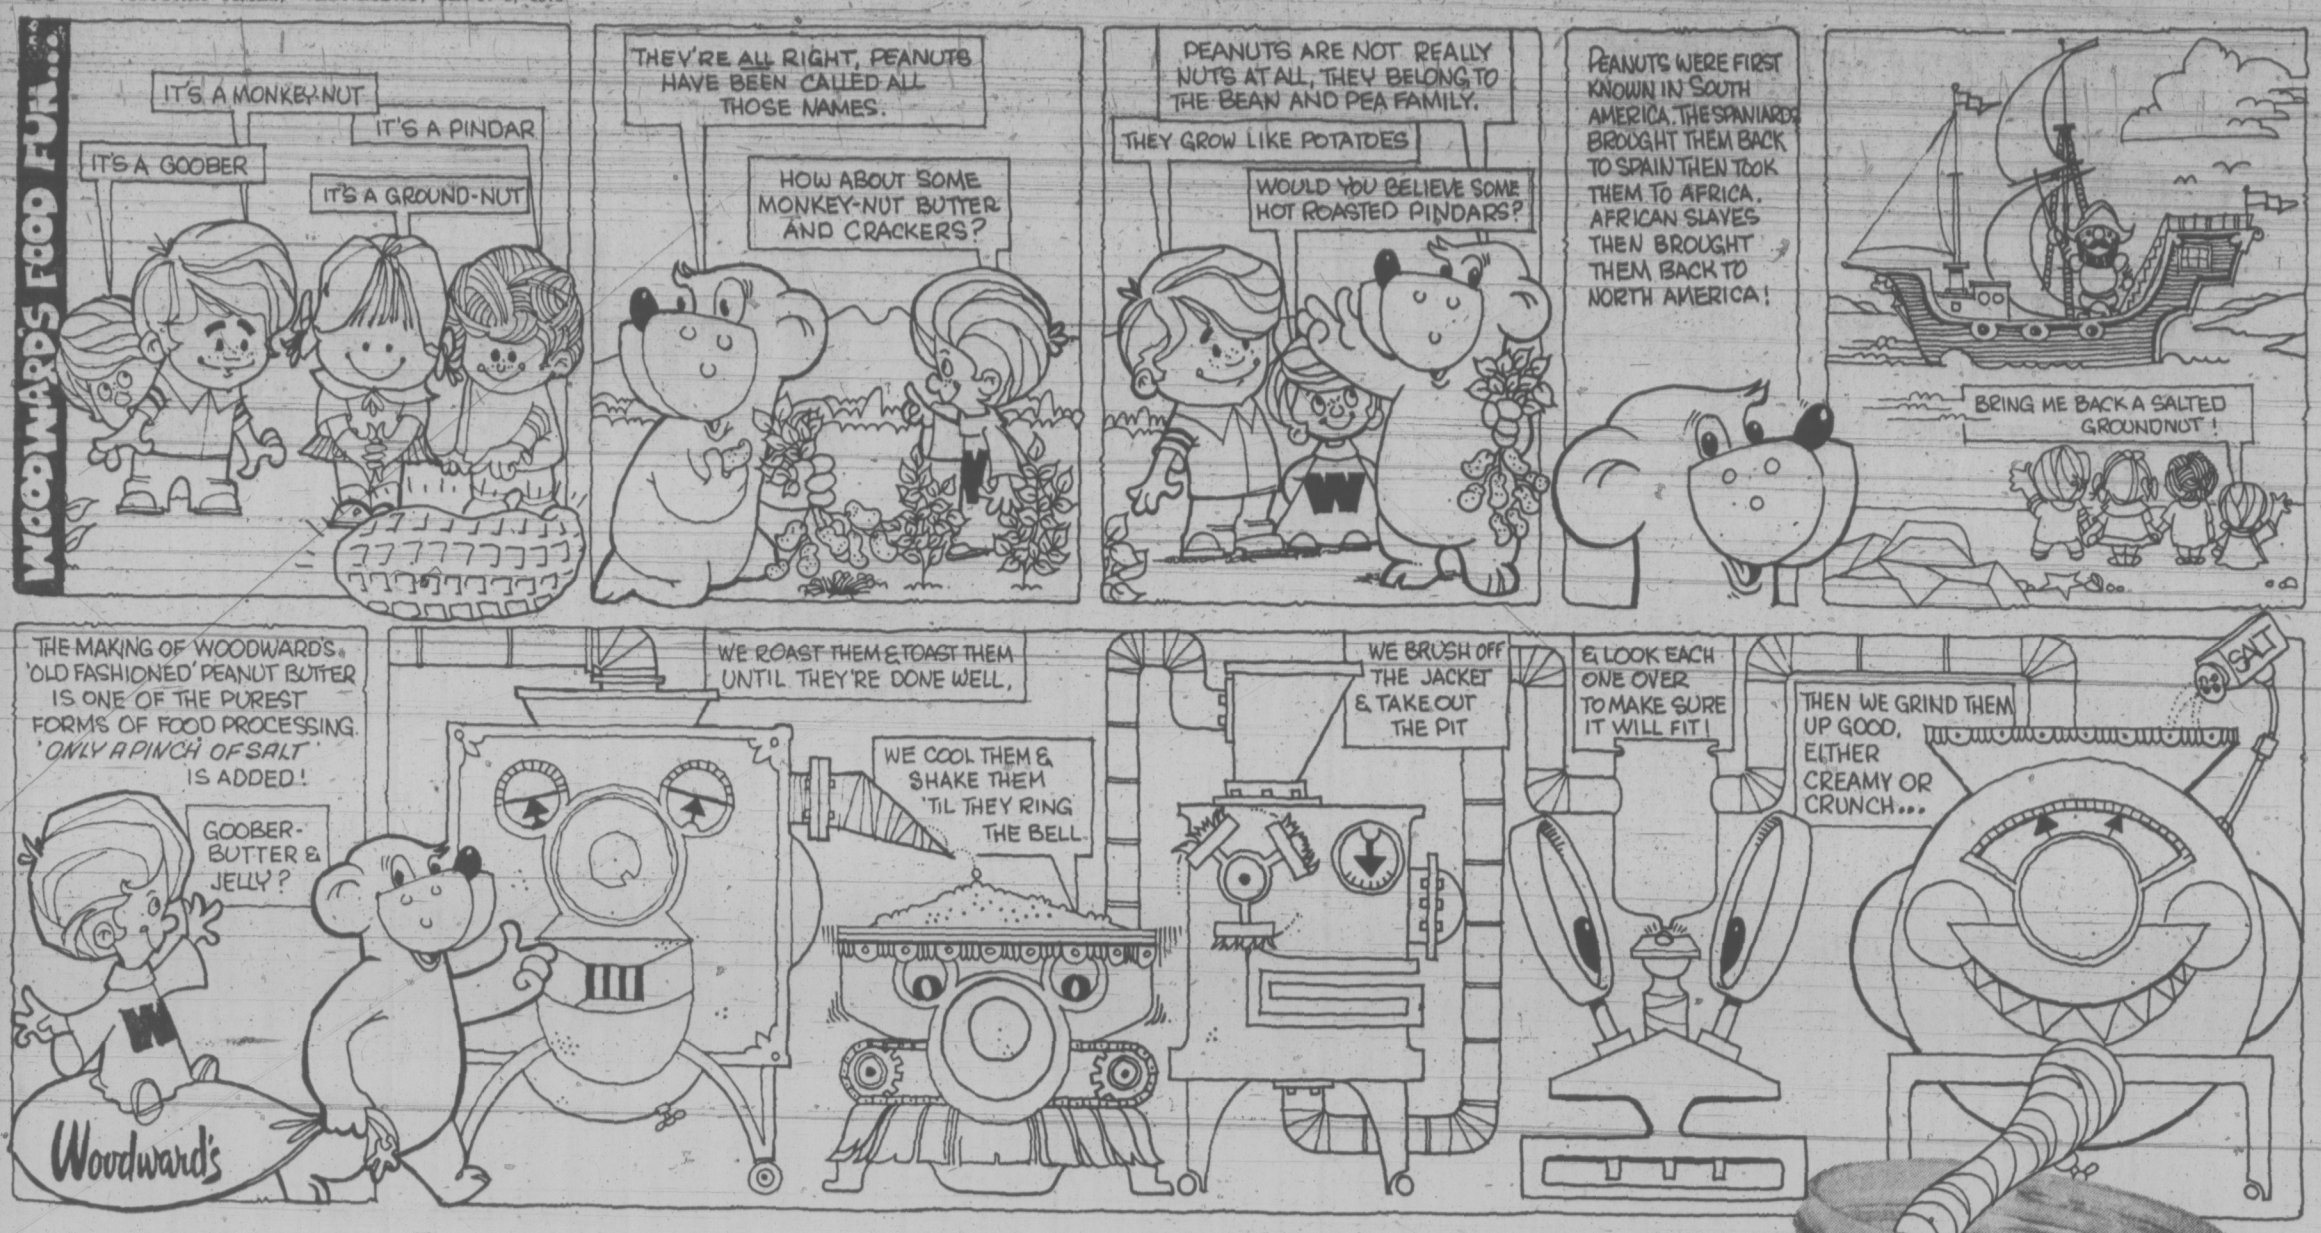

He said so far park crews have constructed three bridges and hope to complete 14 others by November.

"Our program is geared to develop the trail systematically from one end to the other, starting first with the section most in use," he said.

"But in view of the accident we will take another look at the program."

He said the answer might be to clear temporarily the Logan section of the trail of debris and fallen trees. Later the park's crew would install permanent bridges and other trail facilities.

He said the matter will be discussed when park superintendent Jack Holroyd returns from holidays.

ARE FOOD PRICES TODAY REALLY A 'RIP-OFF'?

We hear this term used quite frequently these days when the price of a food commodity rises sharply. The suggestion often is that retailers are taking advantage of a supply and demand situation to increase profits over and above normal margins. At Woodward's we just do not do business that way and to be perfectly fair with our competition — no reputable firm does. We are all concerned with rising costs. Weather, crop failures, labour and shipping costs, and world demand for raw materials are just a few of the reasons we are all paying more for some of the products we buy.

Yet the money spent for food in Canada is still, as a percentage of the average family's spendable income, lower than most places in the world. We pledge that we will continue to bring you the best possible values that we can and will always try to offer alternatives and menu ideas to aid your budget.

SHOP 'TIL 9

Thursday and Friday at All Woodward Stores. Store Hours: 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Mon., Tues., Wed. and Sat. Prices Effective Sept. 5 to Sept. 8th. Personal Shopping Only. We Reserve the Right to Limit Quantities.

Trains Moving In Slow Motion

Times News Services

A New Westminster meeting of the joint council of railway workers voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to continue their defiance of the back-to-work legislation, thus preventing the resumption of normal rail traffic in British Columbia.

Besides the 1,000 workers at New Westminster, about 6,000 other rail workers in British Columbia remained off the job Tuesday, crippling all but isolated rail movements.

Similar pockets of resistance developed at Capreol, Thunder Bay, and Fort Erie, Ont., Winnipeg and Calgary. The Capreol protestors have formed their own association to press for increased wage demands.

A Canadian National Railways crew was despatched to Youbou this morning to switch 12 loads of lumber from the B.C. Forest Product mill.

The Youbou crew and the CN's yard engine crew at Point Ellice were the only rail transport in operation on Vancouver Island.

A CN official said the Point Ellice operation was experiencing difficulties servicing local industry because of lack of equipment.

"There's nothing coming over from the mainland," he said.

Nothing was moving on the Vancouver Island tracks of the Canadian Pacific Railways and the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway.

However, in Nanaimo, Jack Mason, chairman of the Vancouver Island local of the United Transportation Union, said today a meeting Tuesday night voted almost unanimously to return to work this afternoon.

Mason said it's a "reluctant" return to work and "we're still totally dissatisfied with the settlement."

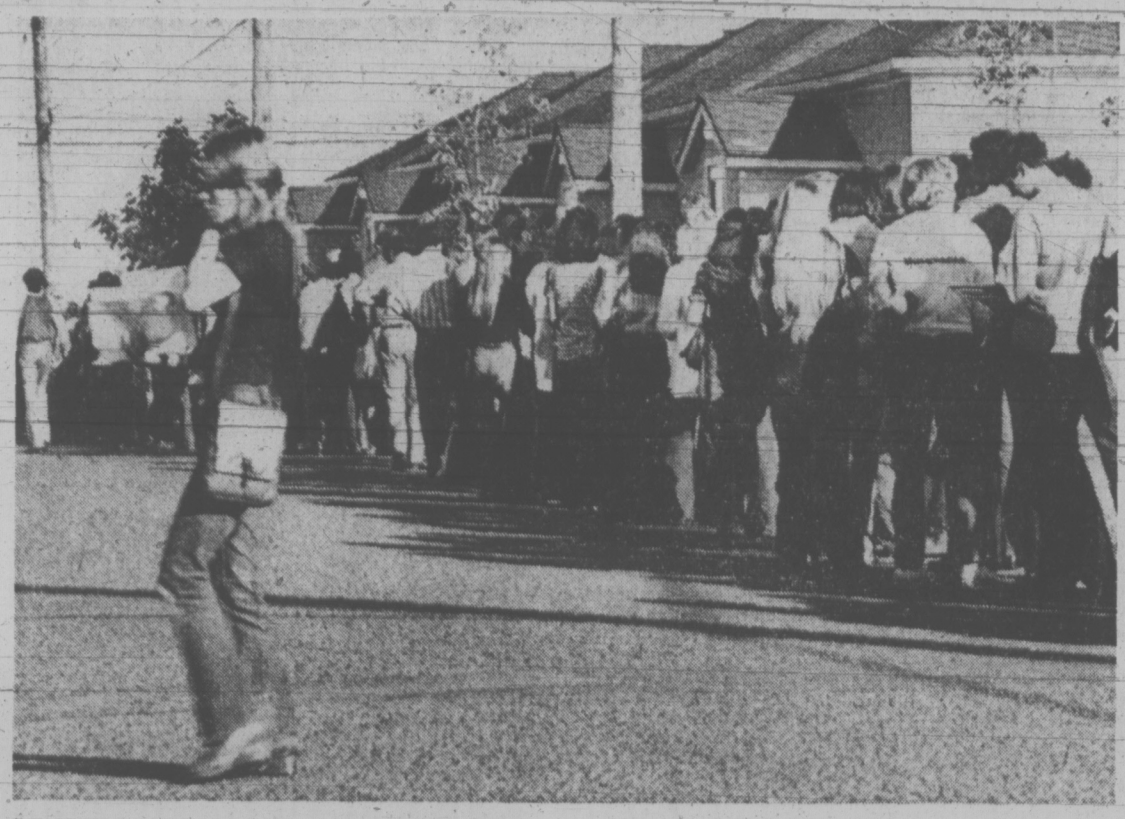

The union represents workers employed by the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway, which is owned by CP Rail.

The CP's Carrier Princess, however, was back on her normal runs between Nanaimo, Vancouver and Swartz Bay, carrying trucks and foot passengers.

The CP's Princess Vancouver was also hauling freight and passengers on her three round trips between Nanaimo and Vancouver.

Meanwhile two Canadian National Railways freight trains, arrived in Vancouver today from Boston Bar, 150 miles east, but a CN spokes-

Oil Firms Angered By Freeze

Times News Services

The oil industry has reacted with anger to federal proposals for a price freeze on petroleum products.

Spokesmen called Prime Minister Trudeau's announcement Tuesday a political move which will, in the long run, be a disservice.

They said it could reduce exploration for oil, thereby reducing reserves, deplete future provincial government revenue and possibly create further conflicts between the provincies and the federal government.

Most spokesmen interpreted the prime minister's statement as a request for the petroleum industry to hold prices until Jan. 30 on a voluntary basis.

However, no one was saying whether they would follow Trudeau's request.

"The independent oil producers are very disturbed by the thought of price controls," said G. W. Cameron, manager of the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada.

"I believe the proposed freeze on crude and petroleum products is solely for political reasons. During the last 15 years, crude price increases have done little more than keep even with inflation."

An increase of 40 cents a barrel for Western Canadian crude oil went into effect on Aug. 1, and some companies said they still had not caught up with the increased costs of their supplies.

Premier Barrett said in Kelowna the voluntary controls are a timid move.

Barrett said the oil companies have not been known for their willingness to co-operate with anyone.

If the federal government found it necessary to bring in legislation to end the national railway strike, it should use legislation to control petroleum prices, he said.

"B.C. will continue to watch the situation very closely", he said in a reference to the powers which exist under the B.C. Energy Act. This act was brought in last spring, but a section providing for price controls in the petroleum industry was not proclaimed into law.

Since Jan. 1, gasoline prices have been increased five cents a gallon in Ontario, four cents east of the Ottawa Valley where imported supplies are used, and 3.6 cents in Western provinces.

NO BUDGET

OTTAWA (CP) — The government at present has no intention of introducing any type of budget, Finance Minister John Turner told the Commons Tuesday.

He was replying to Opposition Leader Stanfield, who asked if the government intended to eliminate its sales tax on building materials and children's clothes in a new budget.

Showdown Looms On Illegal Fishing

The federal fisheries department today adopted a hard line with Indian demonstrators now fishing with an illegal weir on the Cowichan River, bringing the possibility of a confrontation nearer.

Maurice Houghton, director of the department's conservation and protection branch, said from Vancouver there will be a meeting "shortly," possibly today, with representatives of the Cowichan band.

They will be advised the weir the demonstrators are using is illegal and will have to be removed, he said.

The band council had earlier disassociated itself from the demonstration and this is still the council's position, band manager Betty Chown said from Duncan today.

About 30 young Indians, many of them not from the Cowichan band, have been camped about a mile above the river mouth for over a week. To protest restrictions on their river fishing, they have installed a weir, a stake and branches fence across the river which forces spawning salmon into a trap.

The statement from Houghton is the second indication the department is adopting a get-tough stance. Tuesday night Environment Minister Jack Davis said he would not negotiate with anyone who is breaking the law.

Davis had been invited by the demonstrators to come to the weir site Thursday where a submission, detailing their grievances, was to be handed to him.

Gordon Elliott, spokesman for the protesters, said the submission would be given to reporters, whether Davis showed up or not.

Earlier he had said most of the Indians in the band who traditionally fish the river with special permits are not able to spear enough salmon to adequately feed their families. They want to revert to the old-time weir, while ensuring sufficient fish escape to produce future runs.

The protesters want Ottawa to finance a study on the feasibility of establishing a hatchery on the Cowichan.

Last week he said the demonstrators included Indians from Nass River, Bella Bella, Bella Coola, Cache Creek, Lillooet on the mainland as well as Westholme, 10 miles north of Duncan.

Houghton said today there is "some indication" there may also be Indian militants from the U.S.

GUERRILLAS SEIZE EMBASSY

PARIS (UPI) — Three armed Palestinian guerrillas seized the Saudi Arabian embassy and an undetermined number of hostages today, threatening to blow up the building unless they were granted free passage out of France.

The guerrillas also said they were demanding the release of a leading Palestinian guerrilla serving a life sentence in Jordan.

The guerrillas initially gave police a 5 p.m. (noon EDT) deadline to provide them a car to the airport and a plane out of France, but extended the deadline twice.

Hundreds of police wearing helmets and bullet-proof vests and including a team of sharpshooters surrounded the Greystone building in the swank 16th district not far from the Arc De Triomph.

Arabs Cool On Oil

Times News Services

Ministers from major Arab oil-producing countries met in Kuwait Tuesday, but an Egyptian official said there was no discussion of cutbacks in oil production as a possible weapon against the United States.

In Washington, U.S. State department oil specialists assessed the shifting petroleum situation in the Middle East.

The department spokesman said the United States regrets Libya's action in seizing a 51-per-cent interest in five major Western oil companies.

In Kuwait, there had been reports that the ministers considered using their oil production to influence what they consider Washington's pro-Israeli policy in the Middle East dispute.

The minister's meeting Tuesday declared support for Libya in nationalizing 51 per cent of the foreign oil firms in the country on Saturday.

Grits Meet NDP Price

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau reckons he's proposed enough to deal with inflation for now and stay in power a little longer.

As James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) unkindly observed in the House Tuesday, the prime minister had just given the New Democrats about half of what they demanded as the price of their continued support for the minority government.

—Pensions under the old age security and guaranteed income supplement plans will be escalated every three months, beginning Oct. 1, instead of every year, to reflect increases in the cost of living;

—The two per cent ceiling on the annual cost-of-living escalation of pensions paid under the Canada Pension Plan and under plans for retired federal government employees will be removed, the CPP change depending on the approval of the provinces;

—Not waiting for the scheduled Jan. 1 raise in family allowances to an average of $20 per month, taxable, the government will make an interim increase to $12 a month, non-taxable, beginning in October;

—The current $1 per bushel subsidy for wheat will be increased to $1.25 per bushel consumed by Canadians as a "consumer subsidy," but with the maximum as well as the minimum price to farmers being fixed—a measure designed to keep the price of bread from continuing to rise;

—A five cents-per-quart subsidy will be paid on milk in provinces where marketing boards agree to hold or reduce the price of milk for at least one year; and

—The oil industry will be asked to refrain from further price increases to Canadian

KINGSVIEW ACCEPTS

NORTH COWICHAN — George Treit, director of development for Kingsview Properties Ltd., has sent North Cowichan council a letter of acceptance of amended land-use contract demands for a 1,300-home subdivision at Maple Bay.

These give North Cowichan a measure of control never before instituted by a Vancouver Island community, he said.

NEWS BRIEFS

$1 Million Award

EAST HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — A state referee has ordered three labor unions to pay the United Aircraft Corp. more than $1 million in damages stemming from a 1960 strike at the corporation's Pratt and Whitney and Hamilton Standard divisions. The award was part of the corporation's $6,453,869 loss during the job action which included "the involuntary absence of employes because of fear and coercion" ruled the referee.

Pound Plummets

LONDON (UPI) — Britain's pound took a beating today and pulled the U.S. dollar down with it on most European money markets. The price of gold rose. The Frankfurt exchange fixed the dollar at 2.4385, its lowest price for two weeks. Gold jumped more than $2 an ounce. By mid-day it cost only $2.4180 to buy a pound, compared with $2.4415 Tuesday night.

Drug Roundup Nets 20

A major round-up of drug traffickers, mainly in heroin, on Vancouver Island resulted in the arrest of at least 20 people Tuesday night and police are searching for another 17, an RCMP spokesman said today.

The arrests are the result of more than three months of work by two RCMP undercover narcotics agents.

Warrants for the arrests of 37 persons were issued Tuesday and police are seeking suspects in Victoria, Port Alberni, Nanaimo, Courtenay and Campbell River.

Of the warrants issued, 21 involve trafficking in heroin and 16 involve "other drug-related offences," the spokesman said.

Five people appeared in Victoria provincial court today charged with trafficking in heroin and another person was charged with trafficking in LSD.

Joseph Pagnotta, 21, of 1028 Princess, and Micheline Francoeur, 19, of no fixed address, were charged jointly and were remanded in custody until Friday for election of trial method. The two are charged with trafficking in heroin on July 21.

Manning MacKeigan, 22, of no fixed address, was charged with trafficking July 31 in Victoria. He will also appear in court again Friday.

Hefty Terms For Heroin

Robert Langer, 30, convicted July 16 on a charge of conspiracy to traffic in heroin, today was sentenced to a total of 20 years by Victoria county court Judge M. L. Drake. Co-conspirator Michael Kincses, 27, was sentenced to 15 years.

Kincses and Langer were charged Oct. 26 with conspiracy to traffic heroin and possession of heroin for the purposes of trafficking. Also charged at the time were Daniel Hadden, 57, Sharon Dannenberg, 29, and Wendy Dance, 25.

Dannenberg was sentenced to seven years July 20 on the possession charge and the conspiracy charge stayed by the crown.

Hadden was sentenced to five years for conspiracy and acquitted on the possession count. Dance was acquitted on both charges.

Prosecutor Cecil Branson told the court that Hadden and Langer were convicted in 1969 of conspiring together to utter forged documents.

"If there is ever a case of two men who haven't learned their lesson, this surely must be the one," said Branson.

He said Kinscses was "a person apparently aware of the extreme dangers of this venomous substance."

JURY INDICTS EHRLICHMAN

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A grand jury indicted former presidential aide John Ehrlichman and three members of the White House "plumbers" unit Tuesday in connection with the burglary of the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist, it was reported today.

The grand jury, which returned secret indictments Tuesday, was reported to have charged Ehrlichman with perjury and conspiracy to commit burglary for his alleged role in the September, 1971, break-in of the Los Angeles offices of Dr. Henry Fielding.

Convicted Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy and former White House aides David Young and Egil "Bud" Krogh were said to have been charged with conspiracy to commit burglary.

The identity of those indicted and the charges against them were reported by at least two newspapers — The Los Angeles Times and The Washington Post.

Italian 'Way of Life' Deadly

ROME (UPI) — Not enough syringes.

Doctors reporting cholera cases hours late.

Raw sewage flowing into the sea . . .

Italy's cholera outbreak has dramatically exposed some of the shortcomings Italians used to shrug off as part of this country's way of life. Nineteen deaths in eight days have shocked people into awareness that sloppiness can be dangerous.

Health officials have reported 159 confirmed cholera cases since the disease was first detected in Naples August 28. Scores more of suspected cases are under observation.

"Unless we stamp out the disease within three months, there is a danger cholera may become endemic, as in some parts of the Middle East," a provincial health officer said in Milan. The city so far has had only one case but receives a steady flow of immigrants from cholera-infested southern Italy.

Health Minister Luigi Gui said during a visit in Bari, one of the main centres of the outbreak, the spread of the disease had been contained and the condition of patients was "generally satisfactory."

But with the tales of efficiency come stories of sloppiness and disorganization.

In the opening days of the outbreak, health officials in Naples could not find enough syringes to administer vaccine. In Torre Del Greco, one of the worst hit communities, the outbreak found six of the town's 13 pharmacies closed for summer vacations. A health ministry expert in Rome said the government had been notified of the outbreak five days late.

"For 13 years, despite our efforts, no new streetcleaners have been hired and more than half of Naples' streetcleaners are more than 55 years old," Cerciello said.

Rome health authorities blamed the spread of the disease on polluted mussels and other shellfish. The government has banned the sale and consumption of mollusks all over Italy.
